INNOCENT BYSTANDER ONE OF TWO VICTIMS

Mrs. C. C. Moore Is Shot in Left Leg and J. H. Hinkle, Is Hurt—Claude Perkins Arrested.

In a pitched gun battle between occupants of two automobiles Sunday afternoon, two persons were wounded —one an innocent bystander. Neither was dangerously shot, according to Grady hospital doctors, where they were rushed for medical treatment.

Those shot during the fight were Mrs. C. C. Moore, 31, who was standing on the steps of the front porch of her home, 36 Gray street, and J. H. Hinkle, 21, 76 Travis street, one of those participating in the gun battle, according to officers.

Mrs. Moore Wounded.

Mrs. Moore was wounded in the left leg, just below the knee, while Hinkle received a flesh wound in the back.

The battle, which took place at Gray and Bush streets, attracted thousands of people, scores of shots being exchanged, according to residents. A riot call was sent police headquarters.

Call Officers J. G. Bowman and T. R. Glover, who conducted the investigation, were told that two cars—one manned by Joe Carmichael, who lives on Marietta street near Bellwood avenue, and the other in charge of Hinkle, both loaded with male occupants—began exchanging shots as they met. This was shortly after 3 o'clock.

Officers Sent to Scene.

The fight assumed such proportions for a while, according to information conveyed to the police by telephone, that it was feared a general riot was in progress and it was reported at one time that the 22nd regiment might be called out.

Every available call officer, patrolman, traffic officer and detective was sent to the scene of the disorder.

Lieutenant W. H. Andrews, of the plainclothes department, and a squad of detectives were detailed to complete the investigation by acting Assistant Police Chief C. P. Connally.

Hinkle, who had fled from the battle scene before the police arrived, was arrested by Officer H. H. King, attached to the Grady hospital, when he reported an hour later to have

Three Notable Women Figures In the Democratic Convention

MRS. JOHN E. QUINN (LEFT), MRS. EMILY NEWELL BLAIR (RIGHT), AND (BELOW) MISS CHARL ORMAND WILLIAMS.

Three of the notable women figures in the democratic national convention in New York are Mrs. Emily Newell Blair of Missouri, Mrs. John E. Quinn of New York City, and Miss Charl Ormand Williams of Memphis, Tenn. Mrs. Blair is vice chairman of the democratic national committee. Mrs. Quinn is president of the Women's Democratic Club of New York. Miss Williams is one of the most active women workers in the south.

PLATFORM MAKERS GASP FOR BREATH

Caraway and Walsh, of Massachusetts, Submit Rough Draft of Platform Already Nailed Tight.

New York, June 22.—A deluge of platform material, covering a wide range of American domestic and foreign issues, has descended suddenly upon the hosts gathered here for the democratic national convention.

Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, member of the Daugherty investigating committee, and Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, have drafted a complete platform of principles for presentation to the resolutions committee, featuring democratic charges of dishonesty in the republican administration.

William J. Bryan, still the dramatic political crusader, has arrived in New York, bringing with him a plank which calls the democrats to organize for international peace and to outlaw war.

Former Justice John H. Clarke, of

MAY USE MARINES TO HALT ATTACKS OF MAIL BANDITS

Postal Robbers Get $3,285,000 Loot in Series of Bold Holdups During Past Three Months.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, June 22.—The mail bandit, back at his old game again, is taking stakes in the newest outbreak which are alarming officials here, who are puzzling their heads over some way to meet the new attacks. It may become necessary to put the marines back on the trains again, but officials are opposed to that except as a last resort.

In less than three months, postal robbers have secured loot totaling around $3,285,000, in a series of attacks, the boldest of which rival any made in the old stagecoach days in the west. If the hold-ups continue on the same scale, they will surpass the banner year for postal highwaymen in the past, 1920, when over $6,000,000 was looted from the mails.

The series of robberies this year, which did not start until March 25, had their climax in the $3,000,000 hold-up on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul express a few days ago. The value of the loot obtained in this stick-up, however, was not as large as the highest stake in the British Officer Compels Chinese To Honor Slain

Threatens to Shell City If Officials Fail to Honor American.

Pekin, June 22.—Two members of the boatmen's guild at Wan Hsien have been ordered executed for the murder of Edwin C. Hawley, American manager of the Arnold Brothers company. Native authorities were forced to order the executions by the commander of the British gunboat Cockschafer, on which Hawley died after being attacked.

The British officer also forced military authorities of Wan Hsien to act as an escort at the American's funeral, and further forced them to apologize for the boatmen's act. According to dispatches, he threatened to shell the town.

The authorities have now issued an order warning bandits not to molest foreigners.

WOMEN DELEGATES PUT IN DEMANDS FOR TWO GAVELS

"Girl Bloc" Would Name Women as Chairman of Credentials and Permanent Organization.

PROFESSIONAL METHODS MARK THEIR DRIVE

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair Leads Canvass of States to Insure Carrying Out of Plans.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, June 22.—Backed by 416 women delegates and alternates, or almost one-fourth of the convention membership, democratic women leaders today inaugurated a determined fight to gain two major committee chairmanships. Tonight, after a canvass of delegations, they said the outlook for success was bright.

Chairmanships of the credentials and permanent organization committees are the objectives. Mrs. Leroy Springs, of Lancaster, S. C., and Mrs. Daniel O'Day, of New York, are suggested for the credentials chairmanship. Both are prominent and either, it is said, will be accepted to the majority of the women. A western woman, still to be chosen, will be put forward for the permanent organization chairmanship.

Campaigning for the chairmanships is being done in a professional way. First, the women decided it would be poor policy, because of their inexperience in things political, to attempt to gain either the rules or resolutions chairmanships, so they passed them. Not, however, without sending word to men leaders that they would not ask for the places and explaining why. Then, under the leadership of Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, of Joplin, Mo., vice chairman of the national committee, they began canvassing delegations for pledges to elect members of the two committees whose chairmen they hope to name. If the women have their way, they also will have a woman majority on each committee.

Women leaders base their claim for recognition on the fact that they have almost 40 per cent more representation in this convention than they ever had before. In 1920 there were 298 women in the convention. There were fifteen in 1916 and only two, from Washington and Colorado, suffrage states, in 1912. Sixteen women made

PRIME MINISTERS AGREE ON PARLEY

MacDonald and Herriot to Visit League Assembly Together—Formal Conference in July.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

London, June 22.—The British prime minister, Ramsay MacDonald, and M. Herriot, the French premier, have agreed, providing there is no objection from the other allies, that an allied conference shall be held in London not later than mid-July for the purpose of settling definitely the procedure to be adopted for putting the Dawes report into execution.

What is possibly of greater import is that the two premiers will visit Geneva together at the opening of the assembly of the league of nations in September next.

At the conclusion of the conference the following communication was issued from the foreign office:

Reach General Agreement.

"A meeting between the French and British prime ministers was held at Chequers Saturday and Sunday. Friendly and informal discussions took place on several questions which arose out of the Dawes report and measures to be taken in order to put it into execution. No definite conclusions could, of course, be arrived at pending consultations with the Italian and Belgian governments.

"The conversations revealed a general agreement between the French and British points of view and on the part of the two prime ministers a common determination to meet the dif-

Gothamites Fight To Get Out

:: "HIZZONER" STAGES ONE GRAND FROLIC TODAY ::

As Delegates Push To Get In

BY OTIS PEABODY SWIFT.

New York, June 22.—Hail, hail, the gang's all here, all around the town.

Looking important, wearing white pants, walking on the shady side of Fifth avenue or getting down to suspenders and business in New York's best smoke-filled rooms, the delegates to the national democratic convention have rallied to the fight.

Delegates are battling to get into New York at all stations. They have to battle, as all stations are jammed with New Yorkers struggling to get out of New York, due to the heat wave. The delegates think the mobs have come to meet them, and beam. The mobs think the delegates are all dark horses, and cheer, so everyone is happy.

To Outdo Rome Itself.

The "mayor's committee of receptions to distinguished guests"—all of it—has arranged for a monster parade Monday which Plant and Structures Commissioner Grover Whalen says will be "by far the most dazzling spectacle ever staged." Hizzoner's committee is planning to put over something more dazzling than a Roman triumph, Caesar crossing the Rubicon, or Eliza crossing the ice.

A novel feature of the parade will be the fact that bands and firemen will turn out to meet the guests.

Call Out City Employees.

Some 25,000 city employees of the democratic administration here will turn out to make the democrats feel at home. There will be fifty-four bands. There will be soldiers. There will be "hundreds of floats." Regiments of police will show methods of sky scouting and catching river pirates. The street cleaning department will show modern devices for removing snow, garbage and refuse. The educational features of the parade prompt the thought, "Be a delegate —travel—see the world—get a liberal education!"

This dazzling spectacle will take place on Fifth avenue, now the "Avenue of States" as far as the delegates are concerned, and the avenue of summer sales as far as their wives are concerned.

Smith Right Out in View.

Governor Smith and Mayor Hylan will review the parade at Fifty-ninth street, where the national committeemen and women will sit in the main reviewing stand.

Competing with this princely gesture of the metropolis, the Wisconsin delegation will give a luncheon at the Hotel Pennsylvania at the moment the great parade begins. The Arizona delegation will hold a reception at the same hotel when they might be cheering on the avenue, and the Pennsylvanians will meets at the same time.

Well, big as it is, that parade's just nothing to what the mayor's committee is going to do Monday evening. The committee will entertain exactly 3,430 guests—count them—at a gigantic dinner at the Hotel Commodore. The affair is popularly known as "The Mayor's Dinner," and is described as "the biggest dinner ever held in the United States if not in the world."

A unique feature is that the guests will be divided into three sections

TROLLEY VICTIM DIES OF INJURIES IN CITY HOSPITAL

Mrs. Ethel McElroy, With Baby in Her Arms, Struck by Street Car Near Home Friday.

NOT A SINGLE ACCIDENT IN ATLANTA ON SUNDAY.

Although a large number of new cases were docketed, Sunday marked the most successful day since the traffic crusade began in that it was entirely free from accidents, not one being reported either to police headquarters or Grady hospital.

Ninety-three cases were made during the day. Of these 22 were charged with violating traffic ordinances; seven reckless driving; four violating the dimmer ordinance; 12 speeding and eight operating automobiles while intoxicated.

As the result of injuries received Friday night when she was struck down by a street car almost in front of her home, Mrs. Ethel McElroy, 302 Oakland avenue, died early Sunday in Grady hospital.

At the time Mrs. McElroy was injured she was holding in her arm her little 7-week-old baby, Mary Emma, and leading Harriet, her 3-year-old daughter, by the hand. She threw both arms about her infant to prevent its injury and fell full length in front of the car.

The infant was practically unhurt. Three-year-old Harriet was badly cut and bruised.

Mrs. McElroy had started across the street to a grocery store. She stopped before reaching the tracks when she saw an inbound street car approaching. When the trolley stopped at Milledge avenue she thought she had time to cross to the sidewalk. The car started again, suddenly, she said, hitting her and the child.

The mortorman of the street car, A. D. Burdette, 21, who lives on Pharr road, was arrested Sunday night, following the death of Mrs. McElroy, an dplaced under a bond of $2,000. He was charged with the reckless driving of a street car.

She is survived by her husband, Frank G. McElroy, a city fireman; one son, Frank G., Jr.; three daughters, Evelyn, Harriet and Mary Emma; her father and mother, Mr and Mrs. I. F. Styron; two brothers, E. W. and C. C. Styron, and one sister, Miss Grace Styron.

The body was removed to the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

FIGHT ON RULES IS UNDER COVER

Managers All Disclaim Any Intent to Seek Overthrow of Two-Thirds Majority Plan.

New York, June 22.—A thorough canvass of state delegations was predicted by party leaders here tonight as certain to precede any fight for abrogation of the long-established two-thirds rule governing nominations in the democratic convention.

Rumors of an impending effort to change the rules continued to be heard, but the managers of none of the candidates most prominently mentioned would admit they intended raising the issue. Several prominently identified with the party's affairs in fact went so far as to say that leaders supporting the strongest candidates would hesitate in advocating a change unless they were sure that they would be berefited.

At McAdoo headquarters, where there apparently had been some feeling that McAdoo might be helped by a majority rule, it was disclaimed that any attempt would be made there to abolish the carty precedent. Some delegations arriving today expressed the views that the south, much of which is friendly to McAdoo, would oppose bitterly any change in the two-thirds rule and that if a change were to be accompanied by abrogation of the state unit arrangement still more opposition would develop.

Her Life Saved, Girl Who Tried Suicide Is Happy

First Begged To Be Allowed to Die, Now Anxious to Live.

In a moment of despondency Sunday afternoon Mrs. Mary E. Hall, 23, and pretty, of 42 West Peachtree place, tried to end her life by a dose of permanganate of potash.

Rushed to the Grady hospital she pleaded with the doctors to allow her to die and not to try to remove the poison from her stomach.

After the stomach pump had been used effectively and physicians had stated there was no longer any danger Mrs. Hall decided that she wanted to live.

The ambulance driver and surgeon found the young woman seated in a chair by the telephone when they arrived at her home. She was talking with some one and pleading with the listener to care for her baby, saying that in a few minutes she would be dead.

DRYS OPEN HOT FIRE ON SMITH CAMPAIGN

McAdoo Forces Protest Attacks of New York Papers—Bryan Brothers Together But Split.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

New York, June 22.—Managers of the democratic presidential candidates uncorked their first heavy propaganda barrage Sunday, timing it with the arrival of the bulk of the delegates to the national convention which opens Tuesday.

By nightfall most of the delegates had arrived, a dozen of the delegations had held preliminary caucuses and submitted to rough handling in the scramble by managers of various candidates to line up pledges. One of the most spectacular delegation arrivals was held over until Monday, when the California delegation, with three bands, will arrive in state to be received with a great demonstration in which William G. McAdoo and his old friend, Will Rogers, the cowboy humorist, will be the stars.

Outstanding developments Sunday were:

Davis Ship Launched.

1—Formal launching of the candidacy of John W. Davis, of West Virginia, by his friends. This marked a climax in the steady growth of Davis sentiment, which has been obvious here for several days.

2—Arrival of the Bryan brothers —William Jennings, and Governor Charley—the former boosting McAdoo and the latter boosting himself, for the presidential nomination.

3.—Opening of the dry attack on the candidacy of Al Smith.

4.—Protest by McAdoo's forces against the hostile atmosphere of New York City, particularly the attitude of the New York World.

5.—Drafting of platform planks by various factions ranging from the complete proposed platform prepared jointly by Senators Caraway, of Arkansas, and Walsh, of Massachusetts, to the anti-klan plank of Ed Moore, of Ohio, and the anti-corruption and world court suggestions of William J. Bryan.

6.—Smith campaign managers working on southern delegates an-

CONVENTION PLANS ONLY TENTATIVE

Managers Confine Outline to Cover Only Three Days and That Much May Be Changed.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, June 22.—Recognizing the probability of prolonged sessions the democratic national convention managers have only arranged a tentative program for the first three days. These arrangements will carry the machinery of the convention past the adoption of the platform and to the beginning of the nominations for president. After that the program will be dictated by the events.

In order to give the platform committee plenty of time for its work the plan is to hear the nominating speeches for president while the committee is working, then to adopt the platform and then proceed to the balloting for nominations. This same plan was followed in San Francisco four years ago.

The tentative program for the first three days is as follows:

TUESDAY.

Convention called to order by Chairman Hull.

Invocation by Cardinal Hayes.

Official photographs.

Brief address by Chairman Hull.

Reading of the official call for the convention.

Recommendations for temporary officers and their election.

A committee will escort Senator

CORONER'S JURY DECLARES MIXON MURDER VICTIM

Half-Clothed Body of Missing Bookkeeper Is Found Half Submerged in Waters of Creek.

DEATH PREMONITIONS RECALLED BY WIDOW

For Years He Had Believed Himself Hunted, She Says—Mysterious Letter Figures in Case.

Mystery surrounding the disappearance last Thursday morning of Oliver Mixon, bookkeeper for the Phoenix Supply company, deepened Sunday morning with the finding of the body badly decomposed, only partially clothed and with the throat slashed from ear to ear, lying in Little Nance creek, 10 miles northwest of Decatur.

The spot where the body was found is dense with underbrush and about one mile off Dunwoody road, near Chamblee, in DeKalb county.

A youth picking blackberries along side the creek came upon the body at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, and at the inquest held later in the day a verdict was returned that the man had been "murdered by an unknown party or parties."

VICTIM WAS ABDUCTED, HIS FAMILY BELIEVES.

Members of the victim's family are of the belief that he was abducted and slain, and his body carried to the dense thicket and concealed. For several years, his widow stated Sunday night, Mixon has feared that he was being hunted by enemies and often expressed the opinion that he would be killed.

Mrs. Mixon, who was near collapse Sunday night, in a broken voice told Constitution reporters that several years ago her husband accepted a position in Savannah during a ship yard strike and soon after resigned the work, stating that his life had been threatened by the strikers.

Later he accepted a position with the government in Washington, but resigned that after a short time because "he said he was hounded by people who sought to kill him," Mrs. Mixon sobbed. Three years ago he came to Atlanta from Kansas City, working for a time in Birmingham, where he had worked for two years, and since moving here often stated to his widow that he feared for his safety.

LETTER FROM MIXON DELIVERED AFTER DEATH.

Much importance is attached to a letter purporting to have been written by Mixon on Friday, and received Saturday by his nephew, Morris Baggett, 126 Clifton road. The letter, written in pencil and bearing a close resemblance to Mixon's handwriting, stated that the dead man was in the vicinity of Chamblee in search of a farm and said that telephone directions would be given Baggett later in regard to moving Mixon's wife and three small children to the farm.

Baggett stated Sunday night that he was not certain that the handwriting was that of Mixon's and would make comparisons with other specimens of the dead man's writing today. The letter bore a Chamblee postmark and was stamped at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, 30 hours

Atlanta Has Long Bought Only the Goods It Knows

¶ One of those bizarre fads which now and then fall upon a community and set everyone agog on a single subject happened to strike the little town of Atlanta many decades ago.

¶ This particular craze was a craze for singing schools and almost every citizen that wasn't conducting a singing school was attending one.

¶ Now, two drummers heard about all this singing business and they arrived in town one day primed for profits. They started competition against the local talent. The drummers professed unusual experience in vocal instruction and thereupon inaugurated another singing school.

¶ Circulating imposing lists of names, these fellows went up and down the roads asking folks to sign, and, to their amazement, almost every person they met signed up. Not until late that night did the drummers guess what had happened: every man and woman they had solicited, having heard in advance about their scheme, had signed a fictitious name. Next day the two drummers had disappeared and the responsibility for the vocal instruction of the community again devolved entirely upon local talent.

¶ So long ago Atlantans had learned never to buy a pig in a poke. They have found by experience that they are safe in depending on the houses and the brands of merchandise which they meet day after day, year after year in the advertising columns of The Atlanta Constitution.

FUGITIVE KILLED BATTLING POSSE

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 22.—G. E. Speight, a farmer wanted in connection with the killing of U. C. Crawford, a state policeman, was shot to death by a posse today during a gun battle lasting more than six hours. Speight had barricaded himself in a barn and was found fatally wounded with seven bullet wounds in his body when a part of the posse rushed the barn.

Lieutenant M. B. Lilly, a member of the posse, was slightly wounded in the face when struck a glancing blow by a bullet. No other members of the posse was injured although officers declared hundreds of shots were fired during the battle. Speight was located today after the posse under command of Sheriff William Dean and composed of 20 state policemen and 100 citizens had circled the mountains of Berkeley county for 24 hours hunting for him. The man, armed with a rifle and pistol, took refuge in a barn and when he refused to surrender, the battle began.

After hours of firing Lieutenant Lilly headed a squad that rushed the barn and found Speight fatally wounded. He declared his intention to surrender but died a short time later.

Speight was charged with having killed Trooper Crawford Friday night when the officers went to arrest him on a charge of having threatened to kill a county auctioneer, who had been ordered to sell Speight's property for a debt.

Convention Side Lights

New York, June 22.—The main body of Georgia delegates, instructed for McAdoo and on the "dry" side of the liquor question, will arrive here tomorrow by water, one of the few state delegations to make the trip to New York by boat.

The Georgians are headed by Hollins N. Randolph, of Atlanta, and will be met at quarantine by a group of members of the New York entertainment committee.

Should Senator Pat Harrison deliver his address as temporary chairman at the day session of the convention, and thereby deprive radio fans of an opportunity to hear the keynote speech, the Southern Travelers' association will endeavor to arrange for the broadcasting Tuesday night of proceedings of a dinner given in honor of Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader of the senate.

The travelers' association has invited a number of notables to speak at the dinner, including Senators Walsh, Montana; Dill, Washington; Kendrick, Wyoming; McKellar, Tennessee; King, Utah; Pittman, Nevada; Smith, South Carolina; Swanson, Virginia, and Copeland, New York, and Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, democratic house leader.

Burt New, of Indiana, who is to be secretary of the convention, is confined to his hotel room with inflammation of the tonsils, but his physician said today he would be able to take up his official duties at Tuesday's opening session. Today his tonsils were lanced and he was reported tonight to be much better.

One of the convention spectators who will watch the presidential roll calls with unusual personal interest is George B. Christian, Jr., of Marion, Ohio, who was a democrat before he became secretary to Warren G. Harding in 1916. Mr. Christian was reading clerk of the democratic convention in Baltimore in 1912, and called the roll of the states forty-six times before the deadlock was broken by the nomination of Wilson. The former secretary circulated about in the convention crowds today renewing old acquaintances.

A great many of the incoming delegates are missing appointments and making themselves trouble generally by failure to set their watches far enough ahead to accord with New York's daylight saving schedule. Some of them thought they had taken care of the situation when they moved up an hour upon retiring on the train last night, and one confessed today that after much cogitation he had moved his watch back an hour on entering the eastern time belt, with the result that he found himself three hours out of the way.

Two conferences were held today by the three men who in succession will preside over the convention, with a view to agreeing on the order of procedure which each would enforce.

Those participating in the meetings were Chairman Hull, of the national committee; Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, who will be temporary chairman, and Senator Walsh, of Montana, who is to be permanent chairman. It was decided to closely follow the program adopted at the San Francisco convention four years ago. Under this Chairman Hull will call the convention to order, but quickly turn it over to Senator Harrison. The permanent organization, with Senator Walsh in the chair, will be perfected shortly before the states are called to present their candidates for the presidential nomination. This latter stage, Senator Harrison believes, will be reached on Thursday.

the United States supreme court, has prepared a plank urging American membership in the League of Nations. Heading a delegation from the League of Nations Non-Partisan association, Clarke will go before the resolutions committee on Tuesday or Wednesday to plead for adoption of his league proposal.

After consulting with anti-klan leaders, Ed Moore, of Ohio, who managed the campaign for James M. Cox in 1920, drafted a proposed plank specifically denouncing the hooded order by name.

The offering prepared by Senators Caraway and Walsh represents the first complete platform that has appeared in New York. In a preamble the two senators declare that the American people "are profoundly shocked and deeply grieved at the utter lack of public decency and respect for law as has been manifested by this republican administration."

Two Clean-Cut Issues.

Their statement reflects significantly the campaign material which the democrats hope to make of the oil scandals.

"There will be two paramount issues in the coming campaign," the Caraway-Walsh platform declares in its opening sentence. "They are clearly defined and well understood: Do you desire an efficient or an inefficient government? Do you want a corrupt or an honest government?

In former Justice Clarke's demand for a league plank, and in the efforts of other leading democrats, including Bryan, to obtain a declaration for a world peace organization, there is evidence that the democrats will hear aplenty of the vexations League of Nations issue. Newton D. Baker and other backers of James M. Cox, as well as such figures as Carter Glass and Bernard Baruch, are sympathetic toward the promotion of Wilsonian principles. While many democrats do not believe they will profit by making an issue of the league, there is nevertheless strong sentiment in favor of such action.

Bryan Backs World Court.

Bryan's proposal to outlaw war does not rest upon the league. Declaring for the world court, for world disarmament and for a referendum on war, it reads:

"The democratic party pledges all its energies to the outlawing of war. We refuse to believe that the wholesale slaughter of human beings on the battlefield is any more necessary to man's highest development than is the killing by individuals. . . .

"We invite the cooperation of all parties in a determined effort to devise such complete machinery for peace as shall insure the settlement of all international controversies by reason instead of force. To this end we favor participation with other nations in a court of international justice for the adjustment of justifiable questions, arbitration for arbitrable disputes and investigation before resort of war of all differences that cannot be settled by courts or boards of arbitration, reserving at all times and under all circumstances the right to control our own destinies and to determine whether or not, and when, our nation shall declare war.

Hits Bi; Campaign Gifts.

"The moral influence of the United States and the confidence of other nations in our disinterestedness compel us to assume leadership in the world movement for universal peace. Our government should, therefore, endeavor to secure a joint agreement with all the leading nations."

Bryan will also ask for a plank to control campaign contributions, which he predicted would be one of the big issues of the campaign.

After cautious handling of the klan issue, as if it were so much dynamite, by numerous political leaders, a plank definitely condemning it was evolved by Ed Moore, of Ohio. Moore conferred with anti klan leaders before completing his draft, which is understood to meet the approval of those democrats who have been urging an outspoken attack on the klan. Moore's suggested draft reads:

Klan Named in Plank.

"We condemn as opposed to the genius of free government secret political societies of any kind whatsoever, wherever any such society undertakes to destroy free political action and fosters racial and religious hatreds.

"We denounce its activities as contrevening the spirit if not the letter of the constitution, and as a pregnant menace to the perpetuity of American institutions.

"We declare that no member of such a society can justly claim to be a disciple of Thomas Jefferson.

"We pledge the democratic party to oppose the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, or any similar organization which undertakes to control or interfere with free political action or due process of law."

Bryan refused to commit himself on the klan, nor is any specific mention of this ticklish question included in the Caraway-Walsh platform. Following are among the principles enunciated in the latter platform:

1. Honesty in public office.
2. Destruction of government "by the spy and blackmailer."
3. Respect and enforcement of all laws.
4. The right of liberty, free speech, a free press, the right to peaceably assemble, to be secure from unreasonable search and seizure, and to worship God according to dictates of conscience.
5. Prevent "Newberryism" by the enactment of stringent laws against corrupt practices and unrestricted expenditures in national elections.
6. Convene congress immediately after the biennial national election, so as to prevent defeated members from participating in its sessions; allow direct vote by the people on proposed amendments to the federal constitution.
7. Revise the rules of congress so as to expedite legislation.
8. Adjustment of all foreign war loans.
9. Reduce taxation by economy, by refunding war debts, repealing unnecessary indirect taxes, and revising the tariff; repeal Pullman surtaxes and other nuisance taxes.

Conservation Indorsed.

10. Conservation of national resources.
11. Government regulation of anthracite coal industry and "all other private monopolies controlling the necessaries of life where public welfare has been subordinated to private interests."
12. "Generous appropriations and honest management," in care of war veterans.
13. Adequate salaries for postal and other government employees.
14. Rehabilitation of American merchant marine and development of lake and sea ports.
15. Reduction of transportation costs, creation of marketing system and other measures to help farmers.
16. A readjustment of our obligations in the Philippines, so independence may be granted in 10 years.

G. O. P. Boss Ridden.

The Caraway-Walsh platform labels the republican party as "devoid of leadership or a sense of moral rectitude," declares it is "boss-ridden, its candidates picked by predatory interests," and asserts that "its favors are for sale to the highest bidder." It denounces the republicans for alleged corruption, neglect of agriculture and a feeble foreign policy and complains that President Coolidge has "done nothing to indicate that he either cared or comprehended."

In the league of nations plank drafted by former Justice Clarke, the democratic party "renews its declaration of confidence in the ideal of world peace and in a league of nations and a world court of justice as together affording the only practicable means of realizing that ideal by substituting co-operation and justice and law for strife and force and war among nations."

If the democratic party wins in November, it is pledged in the Clarke plank to bring the United States into the league and the world court on such terms as the administration and the senate may consider necessary "to adapt these two institutions to our peculiar national situation and needs, provided only that they be consistent with our constitution and with the dignity and character, the moral responsibility and power of our republic."

In an address at the Church of Heavenly Rest here Sunday night, Clarke declared American entrance to the league was demanded by normal, economic and political reasons.

$100 Bills Sold For Fifty Cents Upon the Dollar

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Tampa, Fla., June 22.—In the belief that he may have been one of those who participated in the great mail robbery near Chicago several days ago, officers of two counties tonight are searching for a mysterious man, who, it is said, appeared at a blacksmith's shop at Winter Haven, Polk county, with two suitcases filled with currency and sold a considerable sum to a blacksmith for 50 cents on the dollar.

The blacksmith, declared to be a reputable citizen and well-to-do financially, said the man drove up to his shop in an automobile Friday afternoon and asked him to get into the car to "see how it runs," intimating that he was having trouble with it.

Money From Hold-up.

A mile or more from the town, the blacksmith said, the man asked if he "desired to make some easy money," and then opened a suitcase containing packages of $100 bills. He sold two of these to the blacksmith in exchange for $100 stating "the money was from a hold-up and I am afraid to spend any of it myself."

According to the blacksmith, the man showed him another suitcase, filled apparently with bills of $1,000 denomination. He made arrangements to return to the blacksmith shop this afternoon to meet friends of the blacksmith and sell them more of the money. Officers were notified and were concealed in the shop at the appointed hour, but the mysterious financier did not appear.

Examination of the two $100 bills bought by the blacksmith revealed they were genuine and not counterfeit as was first suspected. According to the blacksmith, the mysterious stranger had two pistols, one in his lap, and said, in planning his return trip this afternoon, that "only one man at a time could approach his car."

his wounds dressed. He was turned over to Lieutenant Andrews and detectives for further grilling.

Perkins Is Arrested.

Shortly after the battle came to a close police placed Claude Perkins, 28, 130 Julian street, under arrest. Asked if he had anything to say about the fight, he answered, "You can say that I have nothing to say."

Both Perkins and Hinkle are being held on charges of "suspicion."

Lieutenant Andrews is continuing his investigation of the case and states that he will arrest every man who took part in the fusillade. He is working on the theory that the fight was the result of a dispute over the possession of a supply of liquor.

Hinkle and Perkins were in the same car, it is stated. Hinkle, while admitting he was present, denies he took any part in the shooting. He said that he was not driving, but was occupying a rear seat in the machine, and that the fusillade came as a surprise to him. "All that I wanted to do was to get away as quickly as possible," he said.

NO DISSATISFIED RACE SUCCESSFUL, ASSERTS HOLMES

New Bedford, Mass., June 22.—(Special.)—The seventy-fifth annual session of the New England conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion church closed a very successful meeting in the First A. M. E. church Sunday afternoon, Rev. William Lee, presiding bishop.

Rev. B. R. Holmes, president of the Holmes institute of Atlanta, delivered a very interesting address to the citizens of New England of both races. He said no race which is dissatisfied and moving from one section of the country to the other with no objective in view, can reach its highest development.

"Success comes to a race or an individual who is willing to meet obstacles and disappointments and trust God for the rest," he said. "There is no race of people upon the face of the globe which has attained success which did not have to fight for it. The greatest trouble with the colored people in this section, as well as in others, is that they want recognition, property, and other advantages without giving value for what they receive.

"The position and power the white people hold in this country they paid for dearly and will not give it away.

"What the negro should do to gain respect and recognition of the American white man is to quit trying to destroy its leaders, to buy homes and to educate children. 'Character is worth more than money,' should be the watchword."

The New England conference of the A. M. E. church will convene at the First A. M. E. church, Boston, Wednesday morning. Bishop W. H. Heard will preside. Holmes will deliver the opening address, making an appeal for funds for the Holmes Institute.

OHIO FOR COX

Delegates Plan To Follow Tactics Used in Frisco.

New York, June 22.—Ohio delegates arriving today for the democratic national convention declared they will vote for James M. Cox for president until a nomination is made.

They said that by this means they succeeded in getting the San Francisco convention to nominate their candidate four years ago, and that they again will use the same tactics.

Selection of a national committeeman by the Ohio delegation may be postponed until late this week because of a row between the adherents and enemies of Governor Donahey.

AVIATOR PLUNGES 300 FEET TO DEATH

Lexington, Ky., June 22.—Clarence Reynolds, of Gritton, Okla., plunged 300 feet to his death in a rudderless airplane this afternoon before approximately 6,000 persons watching a flying circus on a field seven miles from here.

Brennan Denies Swing to Davis As 'Premature'

New York, June 22.—The name of William E. Dever, mayor of Chicago, will not be presented formally to the democratic national convention for the presidential nomination.

Members of the Illinois delegation have been discussing the situation respecting the Chicago mayor and his possibilities as a compromise candidate, but it was said today by the delegation leaders that the Dever boom had been confined thus far to a complimentary favorite-son status. The future possibilities will be taken care of later, the leaders asserted.

George E. Brennan took occasion today to brand as at least slightly premature recent reports from Chicago that he had expressed a preference for John W. Davis, of West Virginia, and he denied rumors that he had committed his convention strength tentatively to Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war.

AUTO-MOTORCYCLE COLLISION FATAL TO SAVANNAH MAN

Savannah, Ga., June 22.—T. Lee, riding a motorcycle, collided tonight with an automobile driven by Lindsey P. Henderson, son of an undertaker, and died before he could be taken to a hospital.

The automobile carried the motorcycle and its driver over the sidewalk and against a brick wall, demolishing the motorcycle and causing a fractured skull to its driver.

Henderson is barged with involuntary manslaughter. Henderson stated to the police that he was not driving at an excessive rate, but that the motorcycle turned in sharply. Evidence on the paved street showed that the automobile's brakes were put on for some distance. The car rolled over on the sidewalk.

Montreal, Quebec.—Since the beginning of the current year a considerable amount of rolling stock and equipment has been added to the Canadian Pacific railway, owing to increased traffic demands in both the passenger and freight services. According to a statement issued by the company, there have been added to the passenger equipment 22 cars, while to the rolling stock in the freight service 565 additions have been made, and to the locomotive equipment 15 engines of the Mikado type have been added.

INDIANA OUTFIT STICKS TO RALSTON

New York, June 22.—The Indiana delegation arrived today declaring it had no second choice as it intended to "stay with Ralston until he is nominated"; that he is in good health and will gladly accept the nomination if it is tendered him.

M. B. Lairy, of Indianapolis, the senator's law partner, emphatically denied reports that Ralston is in poor health and averse to being nominated.

"I can't understand these stories," Lairy declared. "The senator has been at our office every day since he returned from Washington at the close of the session, and I know he is in good health. Besides, he told me last week that he had not felt better in twenty years."

Second choice talk appeared to astonish the entire Indiana delegation, including former Senator Taggart.

"The idea of our having a second choice is ridiculous," Taggart said. "Our position is to stay with Ralston to the end. We think he is going to be nominated and, therefore, why should we talk about another choice?"

SEAPLANE RECORD FOR TIME FLIGHT IS BROKEN SUNDAY

Washington, June 22.—The world record for sustained flight in a seaplane—11 hours and 57 minutes—was equaled here early today by Naval Lieutenants F. W. Wead and J. D. Price at 12.07 a. m., when their craft was still up and going strong over a 25-killometer test course.

(At the Atlanta.)

John Litel was made for his role in "The Charity Ball." He was born to play it; and he does, with a delightful understanding that won for him new friends, if everyone in Atlanta wasn't already listed in that category: "The Charity Ball" is one of the best of the Baldwin Players shows and the Atlanta theatergoers will be more than pleased with the offering.

"Connie Goes Home."

(At the Lyric.)

Comedy that makes you glad you're alive is the substance of the Lyric Players offering for this week, opening with the ladies' bargain performance tonight. The play is "Connie Goes Home," and displays Isabelle Lowe as a make-believe baby vamp in long curls and short dresses.

Rankin Mansfield is the oily villain, a new type for the gay juvenile. Wilfred Lytell is to contribute a passionate hero characterization. The play is high-class comedy but loses none of its popular appeal because of its class.

"Janet of France."

(At the Grand.)

"Janet of France," international comedienne, is the big attraction at Loew's Grand theater this week, the star of several European capitals bringing a favorite sketch to Atlanta, "A Little Touch of Paris." Featured also on the same bill is Frank Terry, actor, screen star and author, who will give his famous sketch, "Mr. Booze," and three other splendid acts.

"The Code of the Sea."

(At the Howard.)

"The Code of the Sea," a new Victor Fleming production for Paramount featuring Rod LaRocque and Jacqueline Logan, playing at the Howard all this week, is a roaring action-tale of the sea. Rod LaRocque has the role of a first mate on the lightship Barrier Reef. Miss Logan has the role of Jenny Hayden, daughter of the captain of the steamer Northern (George Fawcett plays this part). The big punch in the "Code of the Sea" comes when McDow (LaRocque) receives a wireless message from Jenny's yacht that they are breaking up on a reef.

Hodges Musical Comedy.

(At the Forsyth.)

"The Gingham Girl," called by many critics the best musical production offered on Broadway in many years, will be this week's attraction at the Forsyth theater where Jimmie Hodges and his excellent company of musical entertainers will offer it.

Every scene and every important bit of dialogue included in the original production has been retained in the play this week, and the costumes are just as brilliant and the scenery as extravagant.

"The Guilty One."

(At the Rialto.)

"The Guilty One," featuring Agnes Ayres, one of the most popular actresses on the American screen at her best, opens today at the Rialto theater for the week.

"The Guilty One" is one of the greatest murder mystery dramas filmed in many months.

MURDER REVEALED IN HUNT FOR MAN

after he disappeared from his office. Members of the family are of the opinion that the writing is a forgery and an attempt to make the purported murder appear as suicide. DeKalb county officers are closely following this clue, they said Sunday night.

BODY ONLY HALF CLOTHED WHEN FOUND IN STREAM.

Mixon's body, when found in about three inches of water, was only partially clothed, and was stretched diagonally across the bed of the stream, tending to obstruct a free flow of water. His coat, shoes, hat and socks were missing, the white feet protruding from the water, attracting the finder's eyes first, he said. The body was lying prone on its back, with the left foot slightly drawn up and against the right leg, and arms resting beside the body. A small pocket knife, identified by the dead man's widow as the property of Mixon, was found within three inches of the right hand, with one blade open.

J. Austin Dillon, manager of the Harry G. Poole undertaking establishment, assisted in removal of the body from the shallow water and brought it to Atlanta.

The slash in the throat was the only indication of any violence and both jugular veins had been severed. There was no evidence of blood on the shirt and DeKalb county police are working on the theory that Mixon was killed and his body placed in the stream several hours after death. Two Chamblee physicians who examined the body stated that Mixon could not possibly have cut his own throat. The cut was deep and evidently made with a much larger blade than the small blade of a pen knife.

BODY BADLY DECOMPOSED WHEN IT WAS DISCOVERED.

Decomposition already had set in, lending strength to the belief that Mixon was slain soon after leaving his office at 265 Milton avenue, Thursday morning. He had been employed by the Phoenix Supply company as accountant and bookkeeper, and left the office at 8:15 Thursday to "go for the mail," he told fellow employees. When he failed to return police were notified and instituted a search, ending with the finding of the partially decomposed body Sunday morning at a point nearly 20 miles away from his place of business.

CORONER IS NOTIFIED AND EXAMINATION MADE.

Soon after the body was found Sunday, Acting Coroner C. H. Livsy, of Decatur, was notified and went immediately to the scene, accompanied by DeKalb county police officers, Phillips, Griffin and Henderson. Upon arrival a jury was empaneled and an inquest held. Two Chamblee physicians, examined the body and testified during the inquest that in their opinion Mixon had been murdered, emphatically stating that the depth and length of the wound in the throat, together with the fact that both jugular veins were completely served, proved it was not a case of suicide.

After hearing this testimony and making personal examinations the jury returned a verdict that Mixon had been murdered.

The coroner's jury acting was composed of M. A. Long, foreman; E. C. Allison, W. J. Wilson, J. W. Bailey, Wallis Ellis and Dr. Watkins, the latter of Chamblee.

County officers immediately began a search for the missing hat, coat, socks and collar of the dead man, but no trace of these articles could be found. There was no sign of a struggle and although the passageway to the stream led directly through dense underbrush, there was no evidence of a broken sprig or tree and no signs of footprints.

A valuable watch and chain which Mixon had worn for many years was missing from the body, although $3.99 in money was found in a pocket in the trousers.

No Road to Scene.

The spot where the body was found is about one mile from Dunwoody road, with only a mere trail of a plantation road, leading in that general direction. At a point approximately half-way between Dunwoody road and the place where the body was located, the trail turns.

If Mixon was murdered and carried to this spot, it is pointed out, his murderers would have been obliged to have carried the body in their arms a distance of nearly one mile, inasmuch as an automobile could not have traveled over the plantation trail. The spot is one of the most secluded and the most difficult to reach in DeKalb county, it is said.

If Mixon committed suicide, according to another theory, and wanted to conceal his act, he could not have found a more ideal spot, it is pointed out.

The position of the body in the stream, lack of evidence of a scuffle and the fact that a countrywide search for missing articles of wearing apparel he is known to have been wearing when he disappeared, has revealed no trace, lends suspicion to the theory that the dead body was carefully secreted by persons whose names are not yet known.

Sheriff's Forces Busy.

DeKalb county authorities, working under Sheriff J. A. McCurdy, are following every possible angle in an effort to unravel the mystery which surrounds Mixon's mysterious disappearance and death. At the sheriff's office Sunday night it was stated that county policemen, reinforced by deputy sheriffs, had been divided into three squads and were following three strong clues.

Mixon was reared near Ocilla and an uncle, Warren Mixon, prominent planter of that section, will arrive here Monday morning to assist officers in the case. The dead man is survived by his widow and three children, Mildred, age 11; Oliver, Jr., aged 9, and George, aged 6. He was a member of the Odd Fellows. Funeral arrangements had not been made Sunday night and will be announced today after arrival here of other members of his family.

Letter From "Mixon."

The letter, signed "Oliver," and addressed to Morris Baggett, read:

"Dear Morris: I am going out Buckhead way to see if I can get me a farm, say a small place, and I want you to get Nellie and the childen, as I heard we were going to be run away if didn't get out right away. I will give you directions by telephone to bring them just as quick as I locate a place. Yours,

(Signed) "OLIVER."

The letter was written with pencil. Mr. Baggett stated, and on paper which appeared to have been torn from a roll of paper used in business houses, or from a white paper bag. It was crumpled slightly. The address was printed with pencil, and bore a Chamblee date line, a postmark as having been stamped at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. The letter will be turned over to DeKalb county officers today.

Members of Mixon's family doubt the genuineness of the letter, pointing out that the state of decomposition of the body indicated that he had met death several hours prior to Friday afternoon. Physicians testifying at the coroner's inquest stated that Mixon met death before Friday, otherwise decomposition would not have reached such a stage.

Believe He Was Abducted.

Relatives of the dead man are of the opinion that he was abducted soon after leaving his office, 265 Milton avenue, Thursday morning shortly after 8 o'clock, murdered within a short while and the dead body concealed in the stream early in the afternoon.

It was suggested that his alleged murderers were aware of Mixon's working hours and the morning custom of going to a branch postoffice near the Phoenix supply company, for the mail and that the murderer or murderers seized him en route to the office. It is known that Mixon did not reach the postoffice that morning, thus, lending color to the theory that he was abducted soon after emerging from his office.

A net was immediately thrown out by police and members of the family started on a careful search immediately after the disappearance but no clue to his whereabouts were found until the body was found Sunday morning by a youthful blackberry picker, some 20 miles distant from where he had disappeared four days before.

Although members of the family declined to make definite accusations, they would not accept the theory that Mixon had committed suicide, clinging to the belief that he had been murdered.

Members of his family stated Sunday night that Mixon was a great "home lover," going to his home in Lakewood regularly after work each afternoon at 6 o'clock; that he was never known to touch a drop of intoxicating liquors; that he was well satisfied with his work and apparently in excellent and good spirits at all times. They could assign no reason whatever for the first supposition that he had become temporarily unbalanced and slain himself. Suggestion that Mixon's fears for his safety at the hands of alleged enemies were mere hallucinations were emphatically denied.

BANDITS HOODWINKED AND MAN SAVES MONEY

The composure of Earl Smith, 19, of 58 West North avenue, Sunday night saved him from being victimized of a large sum of money when held up by two automobile highwaymen on West Peachtree street, near his home.

According to the story told by Smith, he was walking home about 1 o'clock when an automobile drew rapidly up to the curbing and the driver ordered him to stop. He complied and the companion of the driver stuck a pistol in his back, demanding that he hand over his money.

Smith then resorted to the arts of the orator. Most emphatically and most earnestly he asserted that he was a poor man, and that his pockets were guiltless of such possessions as those desired by robbers. Finally he convinced his captors, who drove off, leaving the young man with approximately $100 untouched.

Gorilla Herd Facing Danger Of Extinction

London, June 22.—Man's alleged older brother, the gorilla, is in imminent danger of extinction.

Unless something is done about it soon, the strongest link between man and his cousin, the beast, will have been destroyed and the evolutional chain broken, leaving the fundamentalists complete masters of the situation.

British zoologists, clamoring for rigorous protection of the gorilla, claim that there is left only one main herd, numbering not more than 100 and perhaps less than 50. These few remaining reminders of the day when everybody grew his own pants are in the wilds of Belgian Congo. The invasion of civilization in the form of soft-nosed bullets is still further reducing them.

The zoologists, admitting full brotherhood with the gorilla, declare the present killings for museums are nothing less than murder, and want the Belgian government to stop issuing licenses to hunters. Gorillas breed slowly, and the zoologists claim that unless this last herd is left absolutely unmolested, the time will soon come when the only remaining evidence of man's ascent from the ape will be his secret liking for peanuts.

State's Economic Condition Blamed on Rotten Politics

Editor of Manufacturers Record Tells "What Is the Matter With Georgia" in Letter.

Rome, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—Just after adjournment of the 1923 session of the legislature, Representative Lee Langley, of Floyd county, asked through the press the question, "What Is the Matter With Georgia?" Much discussion and many answers followed.

Recently Mr. Langley noticed that Richard H. Edmonds, editor of the Manufacturers' Record, was quoted briefly on the subject and he called the attention of the distinguished editor and economist to the quotation and asked him for a fuller expression of his opinion. Mr. Langley is in receipt of the following reply:

Edmonds' Letter.

"Baltimore, June 11, 1924.

"Dear Mr. Langley:

"I judge from your letter of June 9 that you have been depending upon other publications to tell you what the Manufacturers' Record has been saying about Georgia instead of reading it in this paper. You may, therefore, have received an erroneous impression as to my statements on the subject.

"I have occasionally during the last five or six months emphasized that what is the matter with Georgia is too much rotten politics, and too much concentration of thought even upon what might be called good politics. I do not know of any other state in the union in which political rivalry has been so keen and bitter, and the vilification of one candidate by another so outrageously bad as in Georgia. It has seemed to me for several years that Georgia thinks in terms of politics, sleeps in political beds, eats political food, and thus nourishes political enmities to a great extent.

Unscrupulous Tactics.

"Once far and away the foremost leader of the south in industry, and in agriculture, and in influence in attracting the nation's attention to the south, Georgia became engrossed in politics some ten or fifteen years ago, in some of the hottest political campaigns which I have ever seen. Men in the same party denounced each other almost in an unscrupulous way. This spread from high officials all the way down to petty county officers. A man seemed to think more of the election of some one to a petty county office than of the upbuilding of the state. Newspapers of the state, which once led the south in telling the story of business activity and of upbuilding possibilities, largely concentrated their influence upon politics.

"I remember a good many years ago when one of the flourishing towns in an adjoining state was making rapid development, which it has since continued. I spent a few days in the town without hearing a word about politics; and somebody said to me at the time, 'We are too busy in this town to think about politics.'

"Voting Is a Duty."

"It is incumbent upon every citizen to recognize his responsibility to think about politics and help to secure the nomination and the election of the very best man, without regard to affiliations. The man who votes for an unworthy candidate when he knows that that candidate is not the man or who fails to vote is shirking his responsibility for the maintenance of government and has no right to expect his country or his state or his city to be saved by the votes of others.

"Your suggestion of penalizing every citizen who does not vote is good in its way, but you do not in my opinion go far enough. Your proposition is to deny to all vote shirkers the right to vote at the next election. I am told that there is a country in South America which imposes a fine, I think about $5, upon every citizen who fails to vote unless he has a good excuse to justify his staying away from the polls. If there is no other way to make men and women realize their responsibility to their government and to civilization itself than by imposing a monetary penalty upon them, I would favor doing that; for to deprive a man temporarily of the right to vote, as you suggest, would to a very large number of people be of trifling importance. They would simply say it gave them an excuse for not voting the next time.

Too Many Counties.

"Study the idea of putting a monetary penalty upon them when they do not vote.

"I agree with you that Georgia has entirely too many counties; and I think one of the reasons why Georgia has had so many lynchings is because of the smallness of its counties. Have you ever studied this phase of the situation? If not, get from C. E. Wimpey, of Clarkston, Ga., some of the articles which he has written on the subject. These small counties have been created for the purpose of creating political jobs.

"If absorption in politics and lack of interest on the part of the business men of the state in handling this situation, is not responsible for Georgia trailing behind some other states, then what is the reason? Surely Georgia has as many natural advantages as North Carolina. Surely its people are not willing to admit that they are inferior in energy or initiative to the people of North Carolina. And yet, but a moment ago I was talking with a man who travels very widely throughout New England, and he said to me that everybody in New England was talking enthusiastically about the south, but the only two states which were mentioned prominently in these discussions were North Carolina and Florida.

Carolina Takes Lead.

"Twenty-five years ago the condition was entirely different. At that time practically everybody was talking about Georgia as the foremost state of the south. What has wrought the change by which North Carolina is now the center of New England thought, while Georgia trails somewhat behind? Georgia is a wonderful state in natural resources. It has enormous potentialities. It has superb mountain regions and beautiful valleys. It stretches from the almost semi-tropical region of the coast to the higher mountain sections of the western part of the state. It has great water powers, great mineral resources and it should have maintained its position as leader in material development.

"In 1900 the assessed value of property in Georgia was $433,000,000 as compared with $306,000,000 in North Carolina. In 1910 the assessed value of property in Georgia was $765,000,000 or $152,000,000 more than the assessed value of property in North Carolina. But in 1922 the assessed value of property in Georgia was $1,192,000,000 while the assessed value in North Carolina was $2,576,000,000 or $1,380,000,000 more than Georgia.

"This change is due in part to a genuine increase in values, but in part to a wiser system of assessments of property.

"In 1900 Georgia had $79,000,000 capital invested in manufactories, or $11,000,000 more than North Carolina. But in 1920, according to the census of that year, North Carolina had $221,000,000 more capital invested in manufacturing than Georgia. At that time the total capital invested in manufacturing in North Carolina was $669,000,000 as compared with $448,000,000 in Georgia.

Politics Are Blamed.

"I mention these two illustrations as showing how Georgia has permitted North Carolina to run ahead, and yet there is not a single reason based on natural resources, climate or population, why Georgia should not have kept in the lead it had twenty years ago. Some other reason must be found for not keeping pace with North Carolina, and I have not been able in trying to diagnose the case to find any other reason than that of concentration of thought in politics, which has resulted in disregard of law to a very large extent even by people who should have set a better example.

"If you and others who appreciate this situation will concentrate your energies upon correcting this condition, and concentrating the thought of the people of Georgia once more, as in former years, upon business rather than upon politics, you will do a great work for your state.

Diversification Urged.

"Please understand that I would not criticize Georgia, but as a friend, tremendously interested in its welfare, I am seeking to point out some of the things which it seems to me must be done to bring Georgia back to the front of the column. You have a wonderful state; a glorious region; a state of marvelous natural resources; and I believe the turn has been made. The signs of diversification of agriculture in Georgia are to my mind indicative of the turn that is taking place in the thought of the people of the state. There is no reason for pessimism on the part of agricultural interests of Georgia as seems to have been in evidence for some time, for you can duplicate the agricultural prosperity of North Carolina and of Florida.

"You have great opportunities for the development of winter tourist hotels in Augusta. You have been building superb hotels in Atlanta, a city which in itself ought to be an inspiration to the people of the whole state. But some years ago you had political demagogues prating about this, that and the other. They denounced industrial interests, and railroad interests, hoping to ride into power on the back of their deluded followers; and capital was frightened and people who were thinking of investing in the south turned to other states.

"You permitted the magnificent Georgia School of Technology, with all of its great value to the state, to beg almost in vain for funds needed for its maintenance. You permitted your educational work to slip back on the plea of poverty. But poverty is not a satisfactory plea, for the development of education would develop your business interests. The greatest asset in Georgia, as of every other state, is its young people, and you left them to some extent undeveloped, or you made conditions so unfavorable by politics that you drove many of the active, hustling fellows who ought to have led in Georgia's development to seek employment elsewhere.

"Go to it now, you and every other lover of Georgia. Preach business, preach education, preach good roads, and catch a vision of the limitless possibilities of your state when all of its people have concentrated their lives upon the development of its educational, its moral, its religious, and its material interests.

"Sincerely yours,
"RICHARD H. EDMONDS."

Sudden Disaster Awaits Those Who Procrastinate

You know the "saddest words of tongue or pen"—"it might have been."

Imagine a healthy father suddenly denied work for seven and a half weeks; expenses piling up by reason of his enforced stay at home; no cash money coming into the family treasury.

That's what happened to B. C. Fowler, of 231 Oglethorpe avenue, Atlanta, who was injured in an auto and street car accident on April 17, 1924, near the corner of Gordon and Lee streets. He was riding in a jitney bus, which was struck by a street car, the jitney bus being overturned, breaking his arm and shoulder. He was totally disabled about seven and one-half weeks.

Fortunate for Mr. Fowler, he was protected under the provisions of the $1,000 Travel and Pedestrian Accident Insurance policy which he held with The Constitution. The policy cost him $1 per year in addition to the regular subscription rates of The Daily and Sunday Constitution. Under its provisions he was entitled to protection to the extent of $1,000 against death in certain specified accidents; varying sums for injuries, and $10 weekly indemnity for disability.

As stated above, he was disabled for seven and a half weeks—and on June 10 he received a check for $74.29. This check for $74.29 was what he realized on an investment of only $1, and it came at a time when it was doubly needed.

In line with its travel and pedestrian accident offer, The Constitution is also offering the reading public its famous $500 Group Reader Life Insurance policy, the only straight life offer made by an Atlanta newspaper. It costs only at the rate of 15 or 20 cents per week—depending on the risk involved—in addition to the regular subscription rates of The Daily and Sunday Constitution, and its protection remains in force so long as the policy-holder keeps up payments both on the policy and on his Constitution subscription.

The same economy and efficiency of one or both of these great protective opportunities cannot fail to appeal to you. The future comfort of your loved ones depends upon you—so take this tip:

Phone, write or visit The Constitution's insurance department, and full particulars will cheerfully be supplied you. Over $20,000 paid to Constitution subscribers through its insurance department.—(adv.)

French Marriage Agencies Getting Thriving Business

Paris, June 22.—Matrimonial agencies are doing a thriving business in France. Fifteen per cent of the marriages which have been celebrated in this country since the war were the result of the reading of the matrimonial "want ads," according to the director of the weekly review, Marriage, which is in itself merely an advertising sheet in Cupid's behalf.

War's victims have lost out. At one time, when the patriotic ardor still thrived, it was enough for a man to announce that he was "forty per cent invalidated" to get all the replies he needed to enable him to make a choice. Nowadays the girls prefer a "person with an independent income."

Most of the advertisers belong to the middle class. Men are a majority. The girls, who form the minority, are usually too ugly or too ambitious. Young men are not favored. Aspirants to the happiness offered by the feminine advertisers must have what they call a "situation;" in other words, they must have sowed their wild oats or tame oats and be ready to settle up and settle down.

REED'S CONDITION IS "NOT SO GOOD"

Kansas City, Mo., June 22.—The condition of Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, who is confined to bed in a local hotel, suffering from an attack of arthritis, was "not so good" tonight, his physician reported. His condition, however, is not considered dangerous.

Nelson, British Columbia.—The 1924 cut of the East Kootenay forestry district gives promise of running to a grand total of 150,000,000 feet. While the lumber demand is light, there is a brisk business in poles of longer lengths and in railway ties, and a cut of from 1,000,000 sawn ties and the usual quantity of the hewn variety is looked for, with a probable value of the year's cut totaling around $750,000. Sixteen sawmills are now in operation, averaging a daily cut of 40,000 feet, and indications are that there will probably be thirty sawmills going before the end of June.

FLEEING WIFE CAUGHT BY ITALIAN GENERAL

Rome, June 22.—Mme. Piccio, wife of General Pier Ruggero Piccio, who was reported yesterday to have escaped from Naples with her child after her husband had previously prevented her leaving for America, has been apprehended by a motorboat at sea when she was en route to Corsica, according to dispatches received from Cagliari, capital of Sardinia.

Mme. Piccio, who was formerly Miss Lorando Bachelder, of Chicago, has been separated from her husband for some time. It was reported yesterday that General Piccio, who is head of the Italian department of aviation, had asked for hydro-airplanes to assist him in pursuing his wife.

MANY were repeating previous visits because this wonderland of geysers, boiling lakes, mud volcanoes, high mountain peaks, friendly bears and gorgeous wild flowers never disappoints.

FOR MORE VIADUCTS.

The great value to Atlanta of the Spring street viaduct ought to be an answer to any objection that could possibly be raised against proposed viaducts across Pryor street and Central avenue.

The two latter viaducts have been, as was the Spring street viaduct, a part of the constructive program of Mayor Sims. One has been accomplished, and it stands out as a monument to progress and development second to none ever created in this city.

And now the plans should go uninterruptedly ahead for the two other viaducts that are so essential in Atlanta's great traffic, and enlarged commercial and industrial problems.

To this end the following paragraph from a news story in Saturday's Constitution is most interesting:

"Mayor Walter Sims announced Friday that Lowry Arnold, H. H. Dean, of Gainesville, and Otto H. Feil would appear before the state senate when it convenes next week to urge early adoption of the city charter amendment giving Atlanta the right to build viaducts across the railroad tracks at Pryor street and Central avenue.

"The bill was passed by the house last year but failed of passage in the senate during the hectic eleventh hour rush to get through.

"The project would cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000, to be shared by the city, property owners, street railway company and railroads.

"It would clear up the traffic jam at Pryor and Central grade crossings occasioned by waits for trains and would enable more active business development in that section of the city, according to Mayor Sims."

This states the status concisely and fully. It is hoped that the assembly will grant the charter authority sought so that definite steps may be begun toward this much needed development.

ELECTIONEERING HELPS.

This is election year and many people are having the experience—an experience new to some of them—of running for office.

This thing of running for office—electioneering for votes—seeking to find the way to the esteem and kindly consideration of one's fellow men—and fellow women—is an interesting and not infrequently highly exciting adventure. It is an adventure abundantly rich in possibilities of experience which cannot fail to prove helpful to any person who is capable of being benefited by direct contact with the raw edge of life. Running for office is to the inexperienced candidate what the emery wheel is to the blunt or rusty knife blade—gives it new and increased efficiency but may knock a few sparks out of it during the process.

No man, however hard-boiled—however grouchy or offish he may be by nature or cultivation—can offer for office without feeling a certain regard for the average person he did not feel before and a degree of anxiety to win his friendship and esteem.

In seeking to find the answer to this question—the paramount question with every candidate—new processes of thought will be started and qualities which may have lain dormant for a lifetime will be aroused and brought into play. In seeking the open door to the good graces of his fellows, the candidate must, and does, as far as he may, push his repellant qualities into the background. He cultivates the smile habit—a difficult and awkward performance for some people—and he gets his old stiff joints limbered up by shaking hands.

Running for office is a most effective school in personal courtesy, cordiality and self-effacement; for the candidate feels impelled to follow—or attempt to follow—the example of Shakespeare's character who was urged to "assume a virtue if he had it not."

It has been said that every person ought to be a candidate in a briskly contested election at least once, for only in that way can he realize the glory and majesty of the sovereign people, and—incidently—receive the full chastening effect of the emery wheel.

YOUNG AMERICA.

It is quite the fashion just now to berate the young people—to chide the children with disrespect for parents and elders—to censor youth for its apparent lack of moral perceptions and amazing indiscretions—in short to charge the coming generation with insistent predilections for the broad road which leads to destruction.

If the scattered crimes committed by young persons and the various escapades of the youth of the country could be taken as a fair indication of the character and tendencies of the young people as a whole, the outlook would indeed be alarming. But such is manifestly not the case.

This question, like every other, has its two sides, and it is just possible that we of the older and passing generation may feel a slight touch of petulence when we find our pet corns trampled upon and see some of our old and chefished mental furniture overturned and even smashed by the bumptious, eager, crowding army of youngsters who are to take our places on this little ball of earth.

We have been in possession so long, have become so accustomed to our old clothes, our old views and our old way of doing things, that we resent interference. With us initiative has been tried out, used perhaps to advantage here and there, but at last left like a favorite razor well-wrapped in a napkin to repose more or less uninterruptedly in the dresser drawer. But with youth the thing we call initiative is a new, sharp and attractive tool which he is unconsciously seeking to use for his benefit. The boy experiences an overpowering desire to use the razor, and in his eagerness and lack of skill he may cut himself or he may even slit the skins of his associates, but he is finding the way out of the wilderness of inexperience.

The tendency of our modern life is to arouse curiosity and develop initiative. Our educational systems and the dictum of the business world have placed great emphasis upon it, and we should not be surprised if our energetic youngsters sometimes use this quality in a startling way.

Young America is wonderfully sure of itself. It knows much that its grandparents did not know and it goes after what it wants with an audacity that stupefies members of the older generations. Young America faces many new and difficult tasks; life for it will be more expensive in effort and money—more strenuous and complex, but young, hopeful America is not daunted by these things. Young America not only knows what it wants, but it knows how to get it. If you do not believe this just attempt to argue with any insistent bobbed-haired school girl who has her heart set on an ice cream cone, or the aggressive college boy who has made up his mind that he needs a new pair of sport shoes.

Some men need to spend their vacation at home in order to get acquainted there.

The Philadelphia Inquirer thinks that "greater progress toward enforcement will be made when, instead of keeping prohibition in politics, a greater effort is devoted to keeping politics out of prohibition."

The old world "cuts up" so, it's no wonder the sun is fighting it with fire.

"The farmer feedeth all," but gets nothing from the republican side but a doubtful testimonial.

"Daddy's in jail for runnin' a still," explained the youthful family representative, "and only us young uns to keep the still goin' so's he kin pay out."

Get busy. The dreams don't come true unless the work does.

One critic of the average weather bureau says, "It's a good deal worse than those who talk about it."

A "campaign of common sense" sounds good—if it holds good.

Those Chicago train bandits must have been amateurs. They wanted the earth, but pulled off more than they could get away with.

After all, it's a friendly old world, always ready to meet you half-way for a handshaker.

Don't swear at the helpless weather. Take it out on the weather man.

They're After O. Henry Now!

(Katharine Fullerton Gerould, in the Yale Review.)

I should like to say that, in my humble opinion, O. Henry never wrote the short story at all, and has been an almost unmitigated detriment to American letters. When Wilbur Steele receives an O. Henry prize, all values seem to be reversed. Wilbur Steele is a first-rate short story writer: I incline to believe that he is, at present, our best. Whereas O. Henry, though he gives you often striking or poignant incident, does not create human individuals, and his catastrophes are mere coincidence—not, like Maupassant's, an inevitable doom. O. Henry may have been a master of anecdote, but he never wrote the short story.

Doin' right well,
But we're wantin' to see
All the glory that's comin'
To you and to me!

Today's Talk

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

A WOMAN WHO WON.

One day recently I wandered into a wonderfully attractive and appealing eating place in New York city.

On the window outside I caught the name of Alice Foote MacDougall, and I said to myself; "Who is she?"

I was greatly taken by the beauty and arrangement of the place. Everything seemed to be in such perfect taste. You almost felt that you weren't just off the busy street with its hurrying folks, but in some quiet Italian court.

The lady who gave me my seat had a smile upon her face and the quaint tables, dishes and exquisitely cooked food made me glad that I had to break the day with an hour to eat.

But what interested me most was the story of the one who had created the place as told by herself in a little pamphlet that I found on my table.

She had been thrown upon the world a widow with three small children. She started with only $38, selling coffee. She was 40 years old at the time. Necessity compelled courage. Today finds Alice Foote MacDougall famous in her business and a remarkable success. And this is what she says has brought about her success:

First: A distinct desire to be independent.

Second. A close, insistent study of the conditions that confront the housewife and a desire on my part to satisfy those conditions.

Third: A determination that nothing should stand between me and success.

I don't see how anyone—man or woman—could fail if he followed out such a plan.

Here was a woman who believed in herself and in the thing that she set out to do, and who determined to do it just a little better than it had ever been done before.

And she won—even as you may!

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

New York, June 22.—A page from the diary of a modern Samuel Pepys: Betimes up and came a merry letter from Albert Payson Terhune post marked Africa and regretting he must be away from his dogs so long which is a pity and Lord! how I still miss mine.

So upon impulse to Hartsdale to his little mound and wept unashamed, which some would condemn as silly. On my return put in a Bide Dudley's and played awhile with his children, the fairest I know, and Mistress Taney served some tea and cake.

In the late afternoon with R. Long to call on George Jean Nathan who was ill of a headache but a better conversationalist than most folk in perfect health.

Home where I decided not to work for three days and my wife condoned my laziness. So off to the Green Room club to the dinner to Fairbanks and Miss Pickford and later to my apartment with Will Hart, the actor, and talked until daylight. Thence to bed.

The Theater Guild lifts its head in urge of art with a capital A. It sponsors plays aimed to please the orchestra intelligentsia and apparently cares nothing for gaping savages of the balcony and gallery. The latest bit of its spent magic concerns a student marooned for 24 hours in a lonely Hungarian cross roads. All people of the town have gone on a holiday miles away. A worldly wise Circe drops in by accident off a fast express train. The play deals with the innocent bumpkin's seduction and consequent disillusionment. It is a riffish vehicle than fairly creaks. The play is given at the Garrick—a cluttered old barn of a place, filled with drafts, slamming doors and uncomfortable seats. It is the kind of a play that hastens censorship even as poorly as it is done. It panders to the mob in guise of art—and charges as high prices as any reigning hit.

I set out the other day to purchase a hat. Next to making out the income-if-any-tax it is an ordeal I most dislike. I am not given to fits of temper. Traffic policemen bawl me out, waiters insult me, hat checkers do their worst and I remain blandly unruffled. But I usually quarrel with hat clerks. They insist on clapping one of those horrendous heated mechanisms over my pate to get the shape of my head. The result is the shape of an egg and I feel silly. And the hat I like best is the one they urge me not to take. It is either out of tune with the times or a little too gay for mature years. I walked out of six stores in high dudgeon—making a complete show of myself in each place. And so far I haven't bought the hat.

Watching social climbers from the side-lines in New York is interesting. Crashing the social gate here is well nigh impossible, but with wealth usually comes the desire. There is real society and near society and climbers only make the "near" variety. This is composed of impecunious counts and broken down nobility, a few tarnished divorcees and the like. But the climbers carry on—toting the camp followers to ring-side tables in cafes, first nights at operas and week-end parties at their country estates.

Women in Philadelphia wear more fine pearl necklaces than women in New York. It dates back to a social feud between society in the two cities. At the time pearl necklaces had a greater mark of distinction than they have today and Philadelphia ransacked the world for the finest necklaces.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

It's the Spirit That Counts.

Molenkatse, chief of a savage tribe of cannibals in the unchartered forests that stretch along the Upper Zambesi, was recently converted to Christianity. To prove his devotion to the new religion and his love for the apostle who had preached him the gospel, he brought the missionary the most valuable gift he could think of—half a dozen ears of young girls. The missionary had to explain that such sacrifices were not demanded. The incident is touching because of the spirit which it displays. A crude gratitude that reveals itself in the only way it knows. It also recalls a beautiful legend of the middle ages. A young circus performer entered a monastery. Once within the cloisteral walls he saw nothing he could do for the glory of God and the Virgin. There were many learned men around him, who wrote treatises on deep theological and philosophical subjects. He felt sad when he reflected on his own inability. So one day he quietly entered the chapel, stripped off his monk's cowl and donned his colored clown's dress that he had worn in the circus. And kneeling before the altar he juggled and performed there in sacred adoration. His companions peeped through the doors, they laughed and tittered at his naivete. But they were speechless with surprise when the Madonna, the Lady of Beauty, herself suddenly descended in a blaze of glorious light and with her divine lips touched the forehead of the poor juggler who worshipped her in the best way of which he could think. It's not what you do; it's the spirit in which you do it.

Boer and Briton.

They are singing a song on the back veldts of South Africa that has not been heard since the days of Oom Paul Kruger. The song goes about "Albion that robbed us of our land" and about a "flag that will float again over the hopjes and veldts." It's the nationalist victory over General Smuts that has revived the song and the Boers are restless, for there is open talk of going to war once again with England.

The irreconcilables of the back veldt have never given up hope of regaining their independence. Their leaders are the ministers of the Dutch Reformed church. When Christian De Wet started his rebellion against British rule during the great war and he was thrown in prison by his former fellow burgher general Smuts, the latter was jeered and hounded in the streets of Johannesburg and Pietermaritzburg. The nationalists have never hesitated to call Smuts a traitor and a turncoat for his imperialist British attitude. The victory at the polls of the nationalists under General Hertzog means that there will be an attempt to secede from the British empire, for at least two of the provinces of the dominion, Transvaal and the Orange Free State. How will England and Premier MacDonald meet this demand of self-determination?

America, An Angel.

Fifteen thousand children, orphans every one of them, have been discharged during the past year by the Armenian relief to self-supporting employment. There on the cross roads of the world in Asia Minor, Armenia, Anatolia, Greece and Thrace, the name America is called blessed by thousands upon thousands. An Englishman walking in one of the concentration camps, where there is just about one-third sufficient food to go around, the lens of thousands of Armenian orphans saw a 6-year-old girl patting her little sister and heard her console with the words: "Never mind, dear, America will come. She is your mother and your father. She will feed you and send you warm clothes." There are people who say we ought not to worry over those people out there. It's money wasted. But every cent invested in the salvaging of human lives will pay immense dividends in terms of human value. Cast your bread upon the waters, said a teacher of old.

Rapprochement.

M. Herriot reiterates his declarations for a policy of conciliation. He does not absolve Germany from her obligations to pay reparations, but is anxious that the reich begin setting in operation the machinery of the Dawes plan. This would give him an opportunity to commence the evacuation of the Ruhr. And would equip him with a mighty weapon against his political opponents, M. Poincare and the bloc national, to whom he would prove that you get further with conferences and conciliation than with violence and threats. If the Germans would have a revision of the Versailles treaty they can do no better than by beignning to respond to this sentiment of conciliation enunciated by Premier Herriot. The real France will welcome a democratic Germany. The real France that has been called the Mother of Liberty. The France that served as a flaming beacon when humanity was in need of light. The real France that has been obscured so long by the shadow of the imperialist Raymond Poincare.

The Books of Ivan.

Lunacharsky, commissar of art in Russia, has made a valuable discovery. Down in the cellars and vaults of the Kremlin he has found the hidden library and museum of Czar Ivan the Terrible. The library contains works of the greatest value on early slavonic and byzantine culture in Muscovy. There are also manuscripts of sacred books collected by Ivan's imperial forefathers. During the last years of his life Ivan, that terrible mixture of Mongol and Tartar, became obsessed with the idea that some people wanted to rob him of his art treasures. So he constructed subterranean chambers and had the workmen killed afterwards, so that he alone should know about the whereabouts of his collection. It's hard to believe such cruelty in our days. But then it is even more difficult to believe that the same czar had 1,000 prisoners tortured and murdered before his eyes each day for five weeks running. What M. Lunacharsky has found under the Kremlin will be among the first contributions to culture and civilization that Russia has made since 1917.

Europe's Trend Toward Social Democracy.

A writer in a western newspaper says that the tendency of European thought is in the direction of red radicalism. As a matter of fact the only place where red radicalism is being given a sort of experimental tryout is Russia. The new premier of France is a socialist, but that does not mean he carries bombs or wants to massacre the middle classes. M. Herriot would probably be called a progressive democrat in America. There is little danger that Mijnheer Troelstra in Holland would ask for the head of Queen Wilhelmina should the socialist party gain power in that country and M. Emile Vander Velde, socialist minister of justice in Belgium, told this writer that after the war his party had it within its grasp to overthrow the government, but that it was thought better to proceed along constitutional lines. The only thing that the so-called socialists of France, Belgium, Germany and other countries have in common with the reds of Russia is the revolutionary phraseology, but their interpretation of Marxism differs as widely as Mr. Coolidge's idea of government differs from that of Eugene Debs.

PRICE UNOPPOSED FOR REELECTION IN WARE COUNTY

Waycross, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—Calvin W. Parker, representative from Ware county, failed to qualify against J. D. Price, member of the public service commission, and it is expected that he will announce for reelection to his present position. Others memtioned for the legislature race are Robert C. Folks, William H. Strickland, J. H. Quarterman and W. H. Griffis. Ware county is entitled to two representatives.

At present there are two candidates for the state senate—Jack Williams, editor of the Waycross Journal-Herald and LaGrange Reporter, and Dr. H. J. Carswell. It is thought that J. D. Blalock, former representative, will enter this race.

LIONS' CLUB OFFICIAL ATTENDS CONVENTION

Raiders Get 5 Stills.

Huntsville, Ala., June 22.—(Special.)—Federal and state prohibition officers who returned Saturday from a week of raiding in Morgan, Lawrence, Franklin, Colbert and Lauderdale counties, reported the destruction of five complete distilling outfits during the week. A large quantity of beer and whisky was destroyed. Two alleged operators were arrested, and two alleged bootleggers were picked up in Decatur.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

THE COLIC QUESTION.

The impulse is to start right off in my accustomed fay and assert badly (I've been asserting things that way for ten years now) that there is no such condition as "colic" in babies, but on sober second thought I had better defer that for another ten years, for there are too many old grannies still hanging around and too many old fogies still practicing medicine. Let's compromise by putting the thing rhetorically: Is there really such a condition as "colic" in infants? And if anybody assumes there is, how does he arrive at the assumption?

Colic, as I understand it, is an exquisite bellyache associated with or perhaps directly due to "gas" which distends some portion of the alimentary canal. The younger the infant and the less intelligent the parents, guardians, neighbors, relations, doctors or nurses, the more frequently does this hypothetical "colic" occur. The readiness with which people resort to medicine or dope for infants varies inversely with intelligence. At the present time probably 90 per cent of the demand for alleged "colic cures" comes from the illiterate population, and the other ten per cent from folks who can just read the simplest words in large print.

If I had a baby and the doctor told me he had the colic I'd change doctors. Still, the doctor might be right. Even young babies sometimes have organic disease of a painful character. Anyhow, if the doctor opined the baby had colic I'd say, "Very well, Doctor, your opinion about that is expert; now can you determine what ails the baby?"

To diagnose "colic" in the case of an infant is merely a matter of opinion, not a determinable fact. The opinion of a physician is naturally better than that of any one else. But having concluded that the infant has pain and perhaps gas, the doctor's business is to determine what is causing the pain and distension—in short, to try to find out what, if anything, is the matter.

Young babies cry to beat the band, and draw up their legs and straighten out and have hard swollen bellies and clench their fists and grow red and pale and everything, so that any fishwife would swear the child has the colic, when there's really nothing much the matter—a wet didy, a mosquito bite, hunger, an overload of food, too much noise, prickly heat, nausea from tobacco smoke in the air, the pitiless glare of bright lamps, want of a bath and a nice sprinkling with talcum and a nice fresh nighty and a nice quiet beddy at five or six o'clock. Often, too, often, when a baby puts up an argument for some such care or attention he gets nothing but a dose of some deleterious colic medicine.

An infant will cry long and hard, from any cause, until so exhausted that he becomes weak, blue and cold. It has been wrongly assumed from this that cold or chilling will cause colic. That heat or warmth is soothing when one has pain or discomfort in the belly, from any cause, is a well known fact. Heat, particularly moist heat, is a sovereign remedy in true colic such as occurs in gallstone disease. But we have no ground for the assumption that cold or chilling ever causes colic. Gallstone colic often causes chill. The alleged colic of infants never does—though prolonged violent crying may cause the infant to grow cold.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Practice Limited to Health.

The aim of this department is to provide health advice as a service to our readers; the paper pays for it The requirements to be met by readers seeking this service are fair; Confine your inquiries to health and hygiene, do not ask for advice which should be sought from your physician. Address your inquiry to Dr. William Brady, care of this office, and do not forget to sign your letter. If you desire a reply by mail, inclose a stamped and fully addressed envelope with your letter. Correspondents who ask for information relating to a particular disease condition or its prevention should not fail to explain why they want it, as it is contrary to the health policy of this department to give such information indiscriminately, or for distribution as a tract, or for trying on, so to speak. In no case will descriptions of disease conditions be furnished, nor symptoms or other means wherewith to attempt self-diagnosis.

Inhaling.

Is smoking a cigarette without inhaling the smoke injurious to health in any way? I am 14 (or 17) years old. (J. N. I.)

Answer—It is immaterial whether the smoke is drawn through the nose or the mouth or the deeper breathing passages—the effect is the same, though perhaps inhalation enables the smoker to absorb more tobacco in a given time, as it exposes a greater area of mucous membrane to the smoke.

The French Complex.

I am surprised that the doctors are letting so many people die of smallpox. Does every one depend solely on vaccination? Does no one know there is a remedy for it? I have one that was used in Paris years ago. It is harmless and will cure the sick in 12 hours. There is no need for pest houses. I have offered it to Vaughn but evidently he does not want it. So I offer it to you. Let me hear from you (R. E. H.)

Answer—Usually there is quite a halo of romantic speculation around remedies, cosmetics and the like which hail from France, but smallpox destroyed so many lives and mutilated so may persons in France years ago when vaccination was unknown or neglected, that your remedy—well, let's say we're from Missouri.

Why is it pigeons do not light on fences, or is this true.

It is true that one of the traits of pigeons is that they do not light on fences or trees, but the trait has never been satisfactorily explained.

How many daily newspapers are there in the United States?

2,421.

What is meant by the Heel of Achilles?

This refers to a vulnerable part. It is in allusion to the story that when Thetis, mother of Achilles, dipped him into the Styx to make him invulnerable, she held him by the heel so that the water did not touch it. Therefore his heel was the one spot in his body where he was vulnerable.

How much coal will a bin five feet long, five feet wide and 40 inches deep contain?

It will contain 83 1-3 cubic feet. Allowing 45 cubic feet to the short ton for egg-size bituminous coal, it will hold a little less than one and four-fifths tons. The bin for hard coal will hold approximately two and three-fifths short tons, allowing 38 cubic feet to the short ton. The allowance for the number of cubic feet to the ton is likely to vary about 10 per cent, according to the coal.

How are camelias propagated?

But cuttings taken in August and grown in partial shade.

Name five women who have really done things?

Elizabeth Fry, prison reformer; Dorothea Dix, improved the condition of lunatics and prisoners, procuring ameliorative legislation in many states: Mary Baker Eddy, founded a religion; Florence Nightingale, pioneer in army nursing; Joan of Arc, warrior.

When was rice first cultivated or used as food?

Rice has been cultivated since time immemorial in tropical countries. According to Stanislas Julien, a ceremonial was established in China by the Emperor Chin-nung, 2,800 years B. C., in accordance with which the emperor himself sows the rice and the seeds of four other plants may be sown by the princes, his sons. Rice is not mentioned in the Bible but its culture is alluded to in the Talmud. There is proof of its culture in the Euphrates valley and in Syria four hundred years before Christ.

Pastoral Vows Still Deter Dr. Grant's Wedding Widow

Open Break With His Church, in Addition to Resignation, Required Ere He Marries Her.

New York, June 22.—No longer an active clergyman, the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, famous dissenter of the Episcopal church, is still deterred by his ministerial vows from following the way of his heart and marrying Mrs. Rita de Acosta Lydig.

The handsome, middle-aged minister faces the grave decision to break with his church ere he may wed the woman for whom he proclaimed his love three years ago. Their romance has caught the imagination and sympathies of New York as no other love affair ever has. At the first announcement of Dr. Grant's retirement from the pulpit of the Church of the Ascension on Fifth avenue, from which he defied the fundamentalists in dramatic sermons to an overflowing edifice, it was thought retirement meant complete renunciation of his orders. However, it is now well understood that the bar to the romance still obtains. He is still a minister.

Mrs. Lydig denied, in a statement tonight, that Dr. Grant's retirement meant a renewal of their romance.

"Mrs. Lydig, from her town home, 903 Park avenue, wishes to deny that the announcement she made on May 26, breaking her engagement to Dr. Grant, is in any manner affected by Dr. Grant's resignation from the Church of the Ascension. Furthermore, Mrs. Lydig has no country home and will have nothing further on this subject."

Reference to the country home was in denial of a report that Mrs. Lydig was at Bedford Village, Westchester county, where Dr. Grant has his country place.

Dr. Grant and Mrs. Lydig are no longer young. Their love was neither the impulsive attraction of youth nor the common infatuation of an elderly man for a beautiful woman. He is 64, tall, big, a man of almost lyric speech. She is 48, quiet, retiring and intellectual, and still retains a dignified, elderly beauty. She has been married twice before and both of her ex-husbands still live.

One of them is W. E. D. Stokes, the millionaire who made himself notorious throughout the country during the last few years by his implacable pursuit of his second wife, Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, through the courts in his quest for a divorce.

After the divorce from Stokes the Latin beauty married Major Lydig, a member of a distinguished New York family with a high position in old society of the city. She divorced him in Paris on grounds of incompatibility.

Then, late in her life, she was attracted to Dr. Grant and on August 5, 1921, he startled the gossips of the city by announcing they were to be married. A short time later Bishop Manning, who has been in controversy with Dr. Grant on several questions, let it be known that no Episcopal clergyman under his charge would be permitted to perform the ceremony. Still, the engagement was not broken until a short time ago, when Dr. Grant and Mrs. Lydig apparently resigned themselves to their situation and called it off.

The clergyman's retirement from the Church of the Ascension does not alter the situation, but it would not be surprising to New York if he should finally disregard what he conceives to be mere form and marry Mrs. Lydig, justifying the step by his own well-known principles.

BODY OF PUBLISHER FOUND IN SWAMP

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 22.—The body of Clarence D. Sheldon, 76, wealthy New York publisher, was found today in a swamp about five miles from his summer home at Verbank. Sheldon disappeared about 10 days ago. The condition of the body indicated that it had been in the swamp for several days.

The discovery of more than $200 in cash and a watch in Sheldon's coat and vest, which were found about 20 feet from the body, caused county officials to discard theories of foul play. Coroner John A. Card asserted tonight that death had been accidental and caused by exposure.

It is believed that Sheldon wandered into the marsh a week ago last Thursday, when he disappeared from his home at Verbank. The underbrush near where the body was found indicated he apparently had struggled to extricate himself from the swamp, but had become exhausted.

Self-Defense Will Be Plea of Brunswick Man Held on Murder Charge

Brunswick, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—"Red" Westberry, a white man, who on Wednesday night shot and killed J. N. Brock, operator of fish boats in this harbor, has employed J. R. Thomas, of Jesup, to defend him, and will fight the case on the plea that he shot in self-defense.

Westberry claims that Brock attacked him in an alley when he was en route to his home and struck at him with a double-barreled shotgun. Fearing that Brock would shoot, Westbrook claims that he was forced to shoot first. The cases promises to be hard fought.

FIVE BRUNSWICK MEN GIVEN JAIL SENTENCES

Brunswick, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—Five Brunswick men will serve terms on the state farm for violating prohibition laws, unless their attempt to secure a new trial is successful, and the verdicts reversed. The men—Doyle Brown, Flexer Wilder, T. J. Abbott, Herbert Owens and Frank Laynoeford—were sentenced Saturday to a year on the state farm, with the alternative of paying fines of $300 each at the expiration of the first six months of their sentences. Sentences were imposed by Judge Highsmith, in Glynn superior court.

THREE GEORGIANS INJURED IN WRECK

Pittsburg, Pa., June 22.—(Special.)—One person was killed and 19 were injured at midnight Saturday when a passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad crashed into four derailed freight cars near Walker's Mills, the locomotive, baggage car and a combination baggage and smoking car being knocked from the track.

The passenger train, known as the Pittsburg-Cincinnati express, bore players of the Pittsburg and Cincinnati baseball teams, who were scheduled to play in Cincinnati this afternoon. None of them were hurt seriously and dressing hurriedly, they helped in the work of rescue of the injured.

The dead man was James Griffith, 17, of South Avenue, Pittsburg.

Among the injured, now in a Pittsburg hospital, were: W. E. Butler, Junction City, Ga., left shoulder and left arm fractured; Robert L. Watson, Atlanta Ga., fractured ribs, lacerations of face and body, and Thomas Clayborne, Macon, Ga.; Mrs. Irene Clayborne, Macon, Ga., D. L. King, Birmingham, Ala., all cut and bruised.

A few minutes before the accident—before there even was time to send out a flagman—the four rear cars of an eastbound freight train had been derailed at this point, these cars coming to a stop in zigzag fashion on the westbound passenger track. The express train ploughed into these freight cars, smashing them to kindling wood.

The Robert L. Watson who was reported injured in the train accident near Pittsburg at midnight Saturday could not be located in Atlanta last night.

The only person of that name who could be located here lives on Lakewood avenue and declared that he had not been out of the city for more than five years.

MACHINERY MAKER USES GAS TO DIE,

Chicago, June 22.—William A. Field, 55, millionaire stereo-electrotype machinery manufacturer, killed himself Sunday by turning on the gas in his bedroom at his residence here.

A maid found his body. He had placed his head inside a cardboard box, and had connected a rubber hose from one end of the box to a gas jet. The servant notified Mrs. Field, who said she knew no reason for the suicide as he was in excellent health and had no difficulties.

M'ADOO SAYS THAT FOES ARE CLUMSY

BY RODNEY F. DUTCHER.

United News Headquarters, Waldorf Hotel, New York, June 22.—"Stand fast," William G. McAdoo implored his supporters in a speech before a mass meeting at the Vanderbilt hotel Sunday night.

Declaring a united front would defeat those who are seeking to defeat the McAdoo candidacy by "beclouding the issues," McAdoo attacked the New York newspapers and charged they were seeking to misrepresent his campaign.

McAdoo outlined ten points of his platform, beginning with an attack on corruption and graft.

Refers to Klan By Inference.

He referred to the Ku Klux Klan only by inference, declaring his opponents were "raising racial and religious issues to prejudice popular government." The real issue, he said, was progressive democracy against reaction.

"If we stand fast they can't beat us from now to doomsday," he told his backers.

McAdoo's speech was a reply to the effort which New York newspapers have made to create an atmosphere hostile to him and to counteract reports that his delegates, after voting for him on a few initial ballots, would turn to a second choice.

McAdoo outlined his platform as follows:

Offers 10 Planks.

"1—To rid the government of special privilege, corruption and graft, and to prosecute all persons guilty of conspiracy to deral the government.

"2—To remove the influence of invisible government from the treasury and the federal reserve system.

"3—To repeal the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, which taxes the common people for the benefit of special interests, and to substitute a tariff bill which will help reduce the cost of living.

"4.—To repeal the obnoxious features of the Esch-Cummins railroad act and to set up instead a measure for railroad reform which will eliminate waste, reduce transportation costs, cut freight rates and insure the operation of the railroads for the benefit of the country.

"5—To aid the farmers by establishing lower freight rates and by developing foreign markets which can absorb the surplus agricultural products.

Against Child Labor.

"6—To end the era of isolation and to begin the era of cooperation in foreign affairs, to promote peace and further to reduce the burden of both land and sea armaments to the lowest point compatible with national safety.

"7—To protect the natural resources of the nation, particularly water powers.

"8—To abolish child labor and establish equality of rights, civil, economic and social for women.

"9—To practice genuine economy in government and progressively reduce taxes to the lowest basis consistent with efficient government and justice to deserving employees in the public service.

"10—To virogously enforce all laws."

Calls Editorial Blasts "Clumsy."

Referring to the attitude of the New York newspapers, McAdoo declared he was confident "these clumsy attempts to becloud the issue are quite futile." New York, he reminded his audience, was the seat of an "invisible government," reactionary and unscrupulous and represented by the forces of finance and industry.

His opponents, McAdoo declared, were setting up "straw man issues." But McAdoo predicted that his delegates would remain behind him just as the delegates of Woodrow Wilson had stayed with him at Baltimore, despite the enemy's efforts to wear them down.

POINCARE WARNS AGAINST FAITH IN GERMAN WORD

Verdun, France, June 22.—Former Premier Poincare stepping back into the political spotlight at the moment Premier Herriot was negotiating at Chequers Court with Ramsay MacDonald, British prime minister, today warned France not to trust Germany.

M. Poincare was speaking over the graves of seven unknown French soldiers, buried on the Verdun battlefield at a cermony presided over by Marshal Foch, to observe the eighth anniversary of the critical days of the year-long siege. He took as his text Germany's unwillingness to pay reparations, and the necessity for France to compel her to do so.

2 Candidates Qualify For Solicitor General On Brunswick Circuit

Brunswick, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—Alvin V. Sellers, of Brunswick, and W. B. Gibbs, of Jesup, have qualified as candidates for solicitor general of the Brunswick judicial circuit, and it is reported that Colonel Gaskin, of Hazlehurst, also will qualify.

Mr. Sellers, present solicitor, removed to this city from Baxley, Appling county, several months ago; Mr. Gibbs resides in Wayne county, and Mr. Gaskin in Jeff Davis, leaving Camden and Appling the only counties in the circuit which will not present a candidate.

MRS. GARCIA IS DEAD

Had Been Member of Cathedral for 77 Years.

Mrs. Josephine Garcia, 83, of 167 Forrest avenue, died Saturday night at the residence. She had been a member of St. Phillip's cathedral for 77 years. She is survived by a daughter, Miss Lelia J. Garcia, a son, Thomas M. Garcia, and several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon from St. Phillip's cathderal. Dean Thomas H. Johnston will officiate. Interment will be in West View with Greenberg & Bond in charge.

COX TO OPPOSE PARK IN SECOND DISTRICT

Thomasville, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—Announcement of E. E. Cox, of Camilla, as candidate for representative from the Second district indicates a lively race for that office, as Judge Frank Park, while having made no formal announcement as yet, has informed his friends that he will be in the race for re-election.

Judge Park succeeded the late S. A. Roddenberry, of this city, as representative and the only time he has had opposition for the office was from Mr. Cox, who ran against him six years ago.

Big Police Benefit Circus Opens Engagement Tonight

Everything is in readiness for the opening tonight of MacMahon Brothers' big three-ring police benefit circus, and indications are that the attendance on opening night will set a record for the week, according to John H. Gresham, president of the Atlanta Police Relief association. The circus will be staged in the auditorium, and the opening performance will start promptly at 8:15 o'clock.

With the exception of the fact that there will be no matinee Monday, the program will be presented twice daily throughout the week, the night performances starting at 8:15 and the afternoon performances starting at 2:30 o'clock. In order to allow plenty of time for comfortably seating the large crowds, the doors will open at 7:30 at night and 2 o'clock for the afternoon performances.

The large troupe of performers, with their rigging and trained dogs, horses and ponies have arrived in their private cars, and preparations at the auditorium have been completed for the opening. The show, which has been brought directly from the north in its entirety to play in the interest of the Atlanta Police Relief association's fund, is said to be one of the three largest in the world, with a big bill of the latest in acts and entertainment, and the most modern equipment.

The program at each performance will contain a complete variety of acts and features such as might be expected in only the highest class circuses of today, Manager MacMahon said, adding that the entire program will be presented at each performance. Among the features on the bill may be mentioned the Riding Costellos, known on two continents for their skilled horsemanship; The Flying Delmonts, with a series of thrilling stunts and feats of strength and agility; the Delno Sisters, who combine a highly entertaining act with considerable feminine attractiveness; the Aerial Solts, who perform some hair-raising, as well as entertaining, feats in mid-air; Harry La Pearl and his troup of twenty clowns, including his wife, Mrs. Loretta La Pearl, said to be the only woman clown in the world; Billy Pickle, better known as Charlie Chaplin's double, and many others, including wire artists of national fame, tumblers, bounders and a complete dog and pony show.

Of particular interest to Atlantans will be the diving girl act, which includes as an added feature a diving contest for fair swimmers of Atlanta. A number of entries by well-known local young women swimmers have been made.

On the opening night the newsboys of Atlanta will be the guests of the management at the show, and will be in charge of Billy Finckle, who was once a newsboy himself.

Striking Postal Employees Demand Conference Board

Toronto, June 22.—Postal employees in Toronto will continue their strike until the government assents to their demand for a board of conciliation, A. H. Hull, chairman of the local strike committee, said today. A mass meeting of the striking postal men was held tonight to discuss the situation.

Hull said that 560 Toronto men were in Hamilton attending a conference with representatives of strikers from western Ontario points. The Toronto postal men will attempt to persuade their fellow-workers to walk out again, he announced.

ANNUAL POULTRY SHOW IS SET FOR DECEMBER

Huntsville, Ala., June 22.—(Special.)—The North Alabama Poultry association has set December 10 to 12 inclusive, as the dates for the annual poultry show here. There is growing interest in poultry raising in this region, and it is expected that there will be a large and varied number of exhibits. Election of Joseph B. Hill as secretary for the exhibition was announced.

MAY USE MARINES TO HALT ATTACKS

sensational series in 1920, which was $3,500,000, taken from a train between Omaha and Council Bluffs, on November 13.

Officials here are taking that into consideration, and want to stop the business now in order to kill this latest flare-up. For two years, postal robberies have been cut down to almost nothing. The outbreak in 1920 was followed by another in the early part of 1921, not as costly, but with a number of sensational attacks.

Postoffices Guarded.

In April of that year, Postmaster General Hays put marines on the trains, and stationed them at postoffices with fixed bayonets. This stopped the highwaymen, and there has been no serious trouble until March 25, this year, starting the series which has cost $3,285,000 already. The marines were removed from the trains in March, 1922.

Officials do not want to use the marines again. There were several accidents before, in which innocent men were injured, and one killed, a farmer at Shreveport, La., who was shot by a marine because he refused to move away from the side of a railroad car. Marines are a little too zealous for such work, in the opinion of postal officials, and would be used only as a last resort.

"Housecleaning" Ordered.

"Inside" aid was responsible for the $3,000,000 robbery, it was shown by an investigation, Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett said. He has ordered o thorough "housecleaning" throughout the postal service to find the guilty parties. It is likely that guards may be put on mail trains. At the present time there are no guards on trains, but each clerk is armed. Civilian guards are used on mail trucks.

The robbery opening the series this year was the hold-up of an aged postal messenger in the Harvey station of the Illinois Central railroad at Chicago, March 25. Two sacks of registered mail, valued at $150,000, were seized. The next was at Indiana Harbor, Ind., May 10, when seven bandits held up five postoffice officials and took four mail pouches, the contents valued at $35,000.

On June 11, a truck carrying $100,000 worth of jewelry was held up in New York by 10 young bandits, who kidnaped the driver and escaped with the entire load of jewels.

in the grand ball room. Celebrated guests will occupy a high dais, distinguished guests will occupy a lower platform, and just everyday guests will have tables on the lowest level. Grover Whalen is deciding who'll sit where, a difficult job for a man who probably will have to meet the mere distinguished and plain ordinary guests a second time.

Delegates and alternates from West Virginia and visitors from the state were entertained Sunday by John W. Davis, former ambassador to Great Britain and a well-known dark horse. They traveled in two special cars to Davis' home near Locust Valley, Long Island. Delegates who remained in town explored hotels, talked shop, went to the zoo and visited Coney Island.

One Man Found Drink.

Some watched New Yorkers strew bottles and papers on the grass in Central park, and some, bound for beaches, got caught in a 100 per cent traffic jam at Brooklyn bridge. Some more tried to find a drink, but all grocery stores were closed. It is believed, however, that New York is not yet completely dry. One train from the west disembarked its passengers at the Grand Central terminal Sunday. The visitors walked up the ramp, and into the sunshine of 42nd street. The first thing they saw was a man who was either badly intoxicated or else giving a very clever imitation of that state. This has aroused suspicion.

Meanwhile, dry agents are busy. The "mayor's committee of receptions to distinguished guests" is polishing up the bass drum and tuning the flute. The gang's all here, and convention time is just around the turn.

Harrison, temporary chairman, to the platform.

At this point Chairman Hull expects to ask the convention whether it desires Senator Harrison to deliver his address or take a recess until night.

Should the address be postponed Chairman Hull expects the convention to proceed with organization by the adoptoin of rules and the reference of resolutions to the committee on platform and resolutions. Should the convention insist upon the speech being delivered immediately the organization will follow the speech.

Adoption of a resolution providing for the organization of committees on resolutions, credentials, permanent organization, rules and order of business, to notify nominee for president, to notify nominee for vice-president, and statement of time and place of meetings.

Transaction of sundry miscellaneous business.

WEDNESDAY.

Convention called to order by Senator Harrison.

Prayer.

Report of committee on credentials.

Report of committee on permanent organization.

Address by the permanent chairman, Senator Walsh, of Montana.

Report of committee on rules and order of business.

Adoption of rule limiting nominating speeches for president to twenty minutes and seconding speeches to five minutes, and limiting latter to three in number; also limiting nominating speeches for vice-president to ten minutes for each nominee and seconding speeches to five minutes, and not to exceed two in number.

Adoption of rule recognizing and enforcing unit rule in the delegations of those states which have adopted such a rule in their state conventions.

Resolution of thanks to New York City.

Resolution authorizing democratic national committee to fix the time and place for holding the next national convention.

Resolution providing for the organization of the national committee.

Adjournment.

THURSDAY.

Convention called to order by Senator Walsh.

Prayer.

Announcements by the secretary.

Call of states for candidates for presidential nominee.

After the nominating speeches have been made the convention will proceed to the adoption of a platform.

From this point the program is indefinite. It seems probable that all the nominating speeches in prospect may not be delivered in one day; or a night session may be decided upon.

After nominating speeches have been disposed of, the adoption of the platform becomes the order of business, and if there be a contest from the floor on any of the planks, as now seems probable, condsideration of the platform alone may consume the sessions of an entire day and night.

The platform out of the way, the convention will proceed to the balloting for the presidential nomination. Estimates of the number of ballots which will be taken before an agreement is reached run all the way from 10 to 50.

Nominations for vice president will be made after the first place on the ticket is filled.

PRIME MINISTERS AGREE ON PARLEY

ficulties which beset their countries, and indeed the whole world, by continuous cooperation.

Set Conference Date.

"It was agreed that, subject to the convenience of the other allies, a conference should be held in London not later than the middle of July for the purpose of definitely settling the procedure to be adopted.

"The two prime ministers agreed to pay a brief visit to Geneva together at the opening of the assembly of the league of nations in September."

The courtly formality of old-time diplomacy was noticenbly absent from the meeting. The French party arrived at Chequers Court late last evening in the midst of a thunderstorm. They were met at the entrance to the house by the British prime minister wearing a golf suit. Dinner was waiting and without delaying to change clothes the party sat down immediately.

The meal ended, they adjourned to the library, where the discussions were resumed.

Visit to Geneva Significant.

Much significance may lie in the decision of the two premiers to visit Geneva together. As viewed here, one of the points separating British and French policies was that Mr. MacDonald desired that security for France after she evacuates the Ruhr should be provided through the league of nations. While the French view was that such a security would not suffice and France must have more direct form of security.

If the foreign office communique means that Premier Herriot is becoming converted to the idea of admitting Germany to the league and accepting that form of security, it is felt that much has been accomplished. But events must wait on the attitude of the French chamber, where M. Herriot is less certain of support than Premier MacDonald is in the British parliament. Great importance is attached to the agreed continuity of the negotiations. It is understood that the general conference will be held July 16, and as soon as the British parliament rises in August Mr. MacDonald hopes again to visit Paris for a futher conversation.

PROPAGANDA WAVE GULFS DELEGATES

nounced they had found no evidence of religious feeling entering into the question of candidates.

Davis' Platform Bared.

For the benefit of arriving delegates, Clem L. Shaver, chairman of the Davis-for-President Home Town club of Clarksburg, W. Va., issued a statement predicting the nomination of Davis and presenting certain facts designed to place him before the delegates as a progressive, able democrat opposed to special privilege. Emphasis was laid on this point to offset the attacks which have been made because of the fact that Davis is one of J. P. Morgan's lawyers and enjoys a lucrative Wall street practice which he recently refused to abandon when told that by so doing he could increase his political availabilty.

Shaver pointed out that Davis while in congress helped draft the Clayton anti-trust act, personally prosecuted the harvester trust as solicitor general under Wilson, won the court decision sustaining the Adamson eight-hour law and served with distinction as ambassador to Great Britain.

Statement Significant.

"He is a progressive democrat," Shaver said. "His sympathies are with the average man. He would conduct a smashing campaign against dishonesty and corruption in public office; against special privilege and monopoly; against invisible government; against taxation and tariff policies that increase the cost of living and place disproportionate burdens upon persons of moderate income; against the political system that barters official favors and sells the nation's remaining resources in exchange for campaign contributions and political support, and against any economic system that benefits one section of the country at the expense of another."

In view of the fact that the only opposition to Davis is based upon his corporation connections, this authoritative statement of his position is highly significant and if accepted at face value by the delegates will be of material assistance in forwarding the Davis movement. Delegates from Washington and Nevada called at Davis headquarters Sunday to say they favored Davis as a compromise if McAdoo were stopped, indicating that the easterner has strength in the west.

Bryans Furnish Fun.

The Bryan boys furnished the fun Sunday. They occupy the same suite at the Waldorf but the left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing. In one corner of the Bryan suite Brother Charley, governor of Nebraska and a favorite son presidential candidate, was being interviewed on the necessity of putting up a candidate and a platform which would appeal to the independent vote of the middle west. In the other corner of the same room, William J., wearing his famous convention alpaca coat, held forth on McAdoo, to whom he is pledged as long as McAdoo is a candidate, and discussed regulation of campaign contributions, abolition of war, the world court, the reactionary republican ticket, and other timely topics. Reporters hopped back and forth in bewilderment between the two men, each of whom was the center of an animated group of interviewers.

Politicians awaited Bill Bryan's arrival eagerly. "Will he stage another spectacular come-back?" was the question they asked themselves.

Plans No Speech

"I have no plans for making any speech in the convention," Bryan said. "But I'm an old-time volunteer fireman. I'm sleeping in my clothes ready for a fire at any time. I'm hoping there won't be any fire, but I'm sleeping in my clothes just the same."

Bryan is instructed for McAdoo and disposed of rumors that he would break later in the balloting.

"I am for McAdoo as long as he is a candidate before the convention," Bryan said. "An instructed delegate doesn't consider a compromise candidate."

Campaign contributions will be the biggest issue of the campaign, he continued, announcing that he would propose a plank indorsing limitation of contributions to prevent future scandals like the ones recently witnessed.

"Will you propose a plank denouncing the oil scandals?" he was asked.

"I don't plan to," Bryan replied. "The main benefit of the oil investigation is going to be in its effect on the principles practiced in politics. It is going to give us a clearer understanding of what is right and what is wrong in politics."

He Becomes Indignant.

"What effect do you think the oil matter will have on your candidate?" the writer asked.

Bryan swung around indignantly. "If you're here representing some other candidate you'd better go and ask him," he declared hotly.

"I'm a newspaper man and represent no one except the United News," this correspondent replied.

Despite the fact that former Senator James D. Phelan, who is to place McAdoo in nomination, was asked a similar question Saturday and replied with an effective answer, Bryan persisted that the question was unfriendly and declined to discuss the matter in any way.

Bryan is to be a member of the resolutions committee and promises to be a power in the present convention. He is not disposed to wrangle over the klan issue, but upon the question of campaign contributions and public honesty, he will make a fight which may prove to be a spectacular feature of the convention. McAdoo would like to have Bryan make a speech seconding his nomination, but the commoner has not given his final answer yet. Though they gave him a tragic licking at San Francisco, the old line party leaders are always afraid that Bryan will repeat his famous cross of gold speech of 1896. If they can quiet him by accepting his platform proposals in committee they will do so to prevent a fight on the floor, which would bring Bryan into the arena.

Charley Bryan Points West.

Charley Bryan will be placed in nomination by one of the Nebraska delegates as a favorite son from the farm belt.

"The great agricultural states of the middle west are the states that will decide which political party elects the president next November," Governor Bryan said. "Party names mean little there. They have learned to scratch the ballot. Fifty per cent of the voters can cross party lines twice in the same day without stumbling. They expect the democratic party to nominate a progressive candidate. If such a candidate is nominated, there will be no necessity for a third party."

Reports circulated around convention row are that Smith workers are engaged in a highly organized drive to round up southern delegations to break down the klan opposition to a man of Smith's religion.

Norman E. Mack, who will be Smith's floor leader at the convention, announced late Sunday that he had found no evidence that religious prejudices were entering into the question of selecting a candidate.

Drys Open Attack.

Drys, however, opened up a sharp bombardment of the damp New York governor.

"Governor Smith has betrayed his trust," said Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, in a statement issued Sunday. He denounced Smith's approval of the repeal of the state enforcement act a year ago.

"In order to complete this nullification program," he added, "his wet backers announce their plans to repeal the national enforcement code, just as Governor Smith by signing the repealer destroyed the state code. This plan, if consummated, would leave the nation defenseless and without any weapon with which to fight criminal bootleggers. The beer and light wine campaign is but the entering wedge to accomplish their purpose. Friends of law enforcement will meet and defeat this scheme to nullify the constitution, and will relentlessly oppose Governor Smith and all others who champion that indefensible wet program."

Wets countered with a statement that the Anti-Saloon league "and its child, the Ku Klux Klan, both pledged to the republicans, are brazenly here in an effort to strangle and hobble the democratic party." This statement, issued by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, also charged Bryan with being in the pay of the Anti-Saloon league.

McAdoo Workers Irritated.

McAdoo workers gave vent to their irritation over the hostile atmosphere of New York, which is outspokenly pro-Smith. Samuel B. Amidon, vice chairman of the democratic national committee and one of the McAdoo workers, wrote a letter to the New York World in which he said:

"From a social point of view the city has treated us magnificently but your editorial articles and many of your news articles are an insult to the majority of the states of our country. You are simply treating your guests with every discourtesy that you are capable of, from a newspaper point of view, and we are indeed dumbfounded at the scant courtesy you are showing your guests."

McAdoo manager, Judge David Lade Rockwell, announced he expected no fight to be made against the two-thirds rule.

WOMEN DELEGATES DEMAND TWO GAVELS

speeches in the 1920 convention. The number who will speak this year will be much larger, it is said.

Seek No Special Planks.

Other than the fight for chairmanships, there promises to be no outstanding feature of the women's activities. They are not fighting as a unit for any plank, and, according to leaders, they are avoiding the klan and prohibition plank controversy.

The opposing factions on the equal rights constitutional amendment, who clashed at the republican convention, are here in full strength and already have appeared before the woman's advisory committee, of which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, is chairman.

The question of where to park husbands of women delegates while their wives are discharging their convention activities, once acute, having been settled by furnishing the husbands stage tickets, most of the family problems in the women's section are out of the picture. There was much concern, however, when it was found that the women delegates and alternates had been invited to a dinner tomorrow night but that no official entertainment had been provided for their husbands.

Husbands Not Agitated.

When this news reached the husbands little agitation was shown, so it now appears that the husbands will have tomorrow night off.

Three delegations boast husband and wife as members. They are Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Springs, of South Carolina; Mr. and Mrs. John McFadsean, of Colorado, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Dooley, of Porto Rico.

The only states which did not send women delegates are Louisiana and Florida. There was none originally on the South Dakota delegation, but some were added after the primary.

Many professional and business women are included in delegations. Women attorneys are most numerous. Miss Susan W. Fitzgerald, of Massachusetts, and Mrs. Isabelle Ahearn O'Neil, of Rhode Island, are members of the respective state legislatures.

Two With Bobbed Locks.

Mrs. Sam Phillips, of Memphis, is in the cement business. Mrs. Emma G. Cromwell is secretary of state of Kentucky. Mrs. Josiah Quincy, of Massachusetts, is the widow of the late assistant secretary of state of the United States under Cleveland. Miss Florence Sterling of Texas is the only woman campaign manager present. "Miss Florence," as she is known far and wide by politicians in Texas, is trying to win the vice-presidential nomination for Alvin Owsley, former commander of the American Legion.

Bobbed haired women politicians are scarce. There are just two on the national committee, Mrs. Florence G. Farley, of Wichita, Kan., and Mrs. Eernice S. Pyke, of Cleveland.

New York has the largest number of women in its delegation, forty-eight. Missouri is second and Massachusetts third.

CRACKERS TAKE FIRST OF SERIES FROM CHATTANOOGA

Crackers Hit Stride But Memphis Tightens Lead

Memphis, Tenn., June 22.—Winning four out of five games from New Orleans, the Memphis Chicks tightened their hold on first place in the Southern association race during the past week. And while the Pelicans were being sent back, a few points, in second place, the Atlanta Crackers, in third place, found their batting stride and, including today's game, won eight out of ten.

The Crackers played nine games with Nashville, winning seven of them.

Chattanooga and Birmingham also had a seige of it, the Lookouts winning five out of eight games played by the two teams in their double series.

Nashville retains it's hold on fourth place, with Mobile, Birmingham, Little Rock and Chattanooga forming the second division in the order named.

Memphis defeated New Orleans by hitting some of the crack Pelican pitchers who, heretofore, have proven invincible to the Chicks. In eight games played, including Saturday's, the Chicks won six and lost two, making 79 hits for 23 runs and holding opponents to 24 runs. In seven games, including Saturday's, the Pelicans won four, making 66 hits for 33 runs and holding opponents to 25 runs. The Pelicans made only two errors in the seven games, by far the best fielding record in the league for the week.

Cracker Sluggers Lead.

The outstanding batting feature of the week was the work of the Atlanta sluggers. They drove out 113 hits off Nashville pitchers in nine games for a total of 65 runs. In the double series, Nashville got 81 hits for 48 runs.

Hitting a winning stride two weeks ago, the Chattanooga Lookouts have narrowed the gap between themselves and Little Rock, and are now only two games behind. Little Rock batsmen have been in a slump, compared to their heavy hitting earlier in the season. In six games last week, opponents scored 41 runs on the Travelers, while in nine games, opponents of the Lookouts scored 44 runs.

Home run hitters again were busy, seventeen circuit blows being driven out up to Saturday evening. Birmingham accounted for five of them and Atlanta for five more. J. Anderson, of Chattanooga, got two during the week.

In team batting, Atlanta leads the league, on latest statistics, with an average of .303, while New Orleans, which has led in team fielding from the first of the season, continues to show the way in defensive work.

The week's figures, including Saturday's games, follows:

Teams	P.	W.	L.	T.	R.	H.	E.	LB.	OR.
Atlanta	9	7	2	0	65	113	18	70	48

INDIANS SET PACE FOR HONORS

New York, June 22.—By winning 12 of their last 17 games played against the four first division clubs, the Cleveland Indians have tied the first seven teams in the American league race into a knot of four and one-half contests and overshadowed a winning streak of eight games by the Giants, who are now receiving opposition in the National league only from Chicago.

Starting in the cellar, the rampaging Indians took four straight from Washington, two of four from Boston, three of four from the Yankees and with today's victory, three of five from Detroit. In seventh place, Speaker's squad is only two and one-half games behind Boston and Washington, virtually tied for third, and four and one-half from the top. The Athletics trail the Indians by seven complete games.

The Giants, winning all of their contests, and the Cubs, who took five of six during the week, maintained their positions and now have a five-game lead on Brooklyn, which had a good week and holds third position undisturbed as Cincinnati and the Pirates squabble for fourth, four games behind the Robins. Boston, Philadelphia and St. Louis straggle along at two-game intervals in the last three places. The Cards, battered by New York and Chicago, did not win a game and fell to the bottom.

Cleveland's drive was based on slugging. Detroit combined 100 hits in eight games with good pitching by the entire staff and advanced to within a half game of the Yankees, whose uncertain hurlers have been without their customary hitting support.

The Giant impetus came from the unexepected source of the much-maligned boxmen. In the seven games of the past week the McGraw hurlers held their opponents to less than seven hits and slightly more than one run per game. Behind the excellent pitching the Giants hit and fielded well.

Brooklyn also profited by its brilliant pitching staff. Vance, of the Robins, won his 12th game and now leads the two leagues.

The week's major league total of games won and lost, runs, hits, errors, opponents' runs and home runs, including games of Saturday follows:

Play Qualifying Rounds In British Open Today

Hoylake, England, June 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—All the villages that lie along the Irish sea, and at the mouths of the Dee and the Mersey in the vicinity of Hoylake, talked about nothing tonight but golf, for tomorrow 276 professional and amateur aspirants for the crown of open champion of Great Britain will begin the qualifying rounds of play for that title.

Both courses on which the 36 holes of qualifying play will take place are in splendid condition. One is at Formby, on the other side of the Mersey, and the other here on the Royal Liverpool club's celebrated links, where the actual championship test at 76 holes will be played Thursday and Friday by the eighty or more men whose scores in the qualifying rounds lead the rest of the field.

Of the Americans in quest of the title, four will play over the Hoylake links, and three of their compatriots will begin the long grind at Formby. The Americans who will play at Hoylake tomorrow and at Formby Tuesday are Jim Barnes, who tees up shortly after breakfast, and Johnny Forrell, Walter Hagen and Al Espinosa, who must wait until afternoon to start. Their three countrymen who will strive to qualify in a reverse manner—playing at Formby Monday and Hoylake Tuesday—are Gene Sarazen, MacDonald Smith and Douglas Grant, the latter a resident of London but once a prominent figure on American far-western courses.

Havers Defends Title.

Arthur Havers will defend his title of open champion, won by one stroke over Hagen last year, and all but two of the other British champions since 1892 will try to recapture the honor. Even John Ball, the 61-year-old veteran, still is going strong enough to have his name in the pot of contenders. Only Harold Hilton and Jock Hutchison are missing among the fairly long array of former British open winners. All the rest are here and ready to tee off tomorrow—Taylor, Vardon, Braid, White, Massie, Ray, Duncan, Hagen and Havers.

Havers, who came back from the United States a few weeks ago, tired and worn out, has freshened up and again is playing consistently.

Likewise, Mitchell and Duncan are in good condition. Sarazen has a group of admirers who think that he is very likely to turn the trick this year, and atone for the disappointment he caused in 1923, when, playing in a bad wind and heavy rains, he failed to qualify.

SISLER MAKES PROTEST TO JOHNSON

St. Louis, Mo., June 22.—"Gorgeous George" Sisler, manager of the St. Louis Browns and idol of local baseball, has wired President Ban Johnson, of the American league, a strenuous protest against the indefinite suspension of himself, Catcher Pat Collins and Coach Jimmy Austin.

The three Browns were notified Sunday of the suspension, which resulted from Umpire "Ducky" Holmes' report of the "pop-bottle shower" incident in the sixth inning of the first game of Saturday's doubleheader with the Chicago White Sox.

"Our suspension convinces me that Holmes misrepresented matters to Johnson," Sisler said.

"Things have come to a pretty pass when an umpire can put you out of a game for nothing and then have a monopoly on presentation of the evidence to the judge."

Collins tells the story of the hectic sixth inning like this:

Makes Protest.

"When Holmes gave Sheely a walk, I protested. I told him it was a good strike. Sisler walked in from first and asked where the balls were. I told him they were inside, and he said he could see that from first base.

"'Call 'em right,' Sisler then said to Holmes, without profanity. Then Holmes told him he was out of the game. I said it was a fine way to alibi for your mistakes by putting a good ball player out of the game, and he told me I was out too.

"Then Austin came along and told Holmes he was just a plain crook. He made it good and strong and was the only one who said enough to be canned."

After the three players were put out, the pop-bottle shower by the fans started, and police were called to quell the disturbance.

Dumont Pitches Well Until Eighth Inning When 'Nooga Team Rallies; Score, 9 to 6

Chattanooga, Tenn., June 22.—(Special.)—Atlanta batsmen peppered Hankins whenever the top end of the batting order came up today, totaling five runs off the tall right-hander and then profited by a Lookout comedy inning to score four off Roe without a hit outside the infield. The result was a 9-to-6 victory for the Crackers in the opening game of the series.

George Dumont did not allow an earned run until the eighth, when Al Niehaus got a toe hold at the plate and lined one of his fast ones over the left field barrier, with two on bases. In the ninth, Lefty Roe's triple was responsible for two additional home counters.

The Crackers cut up mightily behind Dumont, making three double plays about the keystone, the last one ending the game. Roy Moore filled in at first well and was pesky at the bat. Paschal's hits figured in the first three scoring tallies. "Red" Smith drove in a brace of counters in the early frames. Dumont was pitching three and two all day, but managed to get the last one over most of the time, with enough on it to save trouble.

One gone in the Cracker first, Moore walked, took third on Paschal's line safety to right. Niehoff caused Clarke to eliminate Moore at the plate, a beauty play, but Smith knocked a blow off Bates' shins, scoring Paschal, and Krehmeyer sent Niehoff over with a clout to right.

Crackers Score First.

In the third, Moore, first up, was safe when Massey booted his roller. Paschal singled to right, Moore stopping at second, whence he scored on Niehoff's two-sacker to left. In the fifth, one down, Paschal got a blow, took second on a passed ball, third on Neihoff's out and counted on Smith's hot safety to center.

The Lookouts got their first tally in the fifth when Crossley safetied and came home on Bates' long fly to left, which Paschal muffed.

In the Cracker seventh, Dumont smacked a ferocious three-sacker over Crossley's dome and scored after Moore's fly was handled by "Dixie" Carroll so far out in right center that it almost required a telescope to see the fielder.

In the last half, one gone, Massey got a blow and Wingfield hit for Hankins. He crashed right to Niehoff for a double death.

Roe Pitching in the eighth, one down, Smith ambled and Krehmeyer got a fortunate scratch over second. Massey and Carroll tangled on Hillis' high one and it fell safe for a single, filling the bases. Roe passed Brock, who replaced Haworth to face southpaw pitching and Smith walked home. Dumont hit sharply to Bates who nailed Krehmeyer at the plate. Kress tried for a double and failed. Hillis tried to score from second and made it when Kress dropped the ball after tagging him. The comedy continued when Dumont was caught off first. Brock was chased between third and home on the play and scored when Roe dropped the ball, after the tag. Zoellers then beat a scratch, scoring Dumont.

'Noogans Rally.

The Lookouts had all sorts of fun in the last two innings. In the eighth, Bates hit, but Carroll forced him. John Andy got his second blow and he and Carroll scored with Niehaus on the latter's home run. In the ninth, Kress went to second when Krehmeyer threw his infield hit wild. Roe scored him with a drive to the right field fence for three sacks and Crossley got an infield hit, scoring Roe. Bates smashed to Krehmeyer for a double play to wind it up.

INDIANS TAKE SERIES.

Detroit, Mich., June 22.—Cleveland won the odd game of the series from Detroit today, 7 to 5. The Indians fought desperately to overcome the lead allowed by Virgil Cheeve, former Chicago Cub pitcher, who made his American league debut with Cleveland today. With the bases loaded, Cheeves was relieved by Metevier, who held the Tigers to 6 hits in 8 innings.

BROWNS LOSE TO SOX.

St. Louis, June 22.—Kolp was batted from the box in the third inning and St. Louis lost the fourth game of the series to Chicago today, breaking even on the four games. Ted Lyons was pounded in the latter innings but held the Browns from victory.

The Browns played without Manager George Sisler and Catcher Pat Collins in the lineup and Coach Jimmy Austin on the coaching line, due to notification given the trio of their indefinite suspension as the result of difficulty with Umpire Holmes in the first game of the double-header with the White Sox yesterday. The notice came from President Ban Johnson, of the American league.

BOSTON REGAINS THIRD PLACE.

New York, June 22.—The Boston Americans won their first victory here today, defeating the New York Yankees, 6 to 2. First Baseman Todt, who is filling for Joe Harris, for the Sox, was the big slugger for Fohl's team, hitting a single, a double and home run and scoring three of Boston's runs. Babe Ruth failed to get a hit in four times up and fanned once.

Ruth Still Holds To Homer Lead

Chicago, June 22.—Babe Ruth, of the New York Yankees, remained out in front of the home run procession this week by getting two circuit hits for a season's total of 17. Ken Williams, of the St. Louis Americans, however, crept closer to the top with three homers for the week, making his total 14 as Jacques Fournier, Brooklyn National slugger, added one to give him a like total.

The contenders for second place in the National league showed little activity during the week, Hartnett, of Chicago, remaining in that position with eight homers, although he failed to knock one out in the last seven days.

The leaders:

American league: Ruth, New York, 17; Williams, St. Louis, 14; Hauser, Philadelphia, 10; Jacobson, St. Louis, 7.

National league: Fournier, Brooklyn, 14; Hartnett, Chicago, 8; Hornsby, St. Louis, 7; Williams, Philadelphia, 7; Kelly, New York, 7.

Thomasville People Join Bibb-Key Fight For N. Y. Real Estate

Thomasville, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—Members of the family of the late W. H. Bibb, of this city, including Mrs. James Gribben and W. H. Bibb, Jr., are interested in the proposed fight in the courts for a billion dollars' worth of real estate in the heart of Greater New York, and have united with the Bibb-Key association to make plans for waging a fight for the property. They claim that they can trace their descent from the original heirs, to whom the property was granted by the king of England. This property is said to include Wall street, Trinity church and other valuable New York territory.

Democrats Break Party Precedent In Illinois Race

New York, June 22.—Breaking all precedents, democrats have put up a negro for congress.

The Illinois state committee held a meeting here Sunday and agreed upon Earl B. Dickerson, of Chicago, a negro, as a candidate for congress against Representative Martin B. Madden, republican.

The negro was substituted as the democratic congressional candidate in the first Illinois district because of the illness of James Doyle, who was nominated at the primary.

This is the first time the democratic party has put up a negro for congress. The first Illinois district has a large negro population and normally is two-thirds republican. But in the recent republican primaries a negro ran against Madden for the republican nomination and received 6,000 votes against 9,000 for Madden. The illness of Doyle gave the democrats a chance to take advantage of the showing made by the republican negro and put up a democratic negro candidate.

The selection has the sanction of George Brennan, the Illinois democratic boss, who has a large following among negroes because of his anti-klan activity. Negroes have sent him many telegrams since he arrived here with the announcement that he would demand a plank specifically denouncing the klan. Illinois democratic leaders believe this will be reflected in a large democratic vote at the next election, hence the placing of Dickerson on the ticket.

Play Scoreless Tie.

Almand Park and the Atlanta Steel Hoop team of the Spalding league battled 13 innings to a 0 to 0 tie yesterday afternoon at Almand park.

The game was a pretty pitchers' battle between "Slim" Schmidt, of the Almand Park, and Perkins, of the Steel Hoop, each man going the entire route and only giving up five hits in the 13 innings of playing.

The batteries were: Perkins and Perkins, for the Atlanta Steel Hoop, Schmidt and Gravin and Thompson, for Almand Park.

One hundred Danish plows and 150 American tractors were recently shipped to soviet Russia.

Weather Fails To Halt Practice

On Board the Steamship America, June 22.—(By the Associated Press.) The American athletes on their way to the Olympic games had their first experience with heavy seas yesterday, but this did not stop the workouts on board the America, in which the swimmers and boxers were most active. Mennigan, the distance runner, was added to the hospital list by reason of seasickness. Perry Martter, the Los Angeles A. C. wrestler, is carrying his left arm in a sling, because of an attack of neuritis.

Today the ablest were allowed to rest. Coach "Spike" Webb, of the boxers, expects to send some of his men down into the engine room to help the stokers of the America so that the boxers will be able to take off some of their surplus weight.

Lawson Robertson, coach of the track and field team, is instructing the runners in the French method of starting races in order to avoid a recurrence of the 1920 misfortune to the team, when Loren Murchison was left at the mark in the 100-meter dash.

Eighteen American track and field men have been entered for the Irish Olympic games, to be held in Dublin August 2 to August 13. It is expected also that several swimmers, wrestlers and boxers will go to Ireland. Prominent among those who will make the trip are Matt McGrath, the hammer thrower, and H. M. Osborn, Illinois A. C., who will compete in six events; W. E. Comins, the Yale jumper, and Francis Hussey, the New York sprinter.

Maple syrup, so popular in this country, is practically unknown in Europe.

TwoGamesPlayed At Fort Sunday

Two good games were played at Fort McPherson by local amateur teams before a large Sunday crowd of baseball fans. The College Park nine defeated the Commodore Feds 5 to 3 in the first contest while the Perin Athletics defeated the Georgia & West Point railway team 5 to 0 in the final affair.

College Park won the first game, an 11-inning affair, from the Commodore Feds by a score of 5 to 3.

After evening up the score in the first half of the ninth inning, College Park came to bat in the 11th inning and won the game. Stevens was given a base on balls. He immediately stole second and raced home when Allen singled to left field. The scoring was not yet over for Estes then hit one to deep center field for a home run, scoring Allen ahead of him, making the score 5 to 2.

The Feds came back with a rally but it was cut short by some brilliant fielding after one run had been shoved across the plate.

The Athletics won from the Georgia-West Point club, of the city league, in the second game by the score of 5 to 0.

The railroad boys could do nothing with "Lefty" Larsen, who struck out 10 men and allowed but two hits.

The Athletics backed Larsen up in splendid shape and the game was never in doubt after the second inning. The railroad lads played a good game in the field.

AVERA FIGHTS TONIGHT IN PENSACOLA

After a layoff of nearly two months during which he has been unable to get an acceptance to challenges, Larry Avera, fast junior welterweight boxer, of Atlanta, tonight goes on in the main attraction of a Pensacola, Fla., card against Young Wallace, welterweight.

Arrangements for the Avera-Wallace match were completed yesterday by Billy Lotz, Avera's manager, after numerous telegrams challenging Wallace.

Wallace claims New Orleans as his home port and has a hefty record behind him as he goes into the open-air ring in Pensacola tonight against Avera.

Before leaving last evening for Pensacola Avera was declared by his physician to be in the best of physical condition with the exception of his left wrist, which was lacerated several days ago when Avera was in an automobile that turned over. The doctor said, however, that the wound is well enough healed to keep from giving Avera trouble in his bout tonight.

Avera's last fight was that in which he scored a technical knockout on the Walloping Wop, a soldier from Fort McPherson, who had a long string of consecutive victories to his credit. The fight took place in Atlanta late in April as the semi-windup of the Tiger Flowers-George Robinson match at the Auditorium.

Lotz accompanied Avera to Pensacola last night and will be with him in his corner tonight. Lotz, however, will have little to do between rounds beyond giving Avera a word of advice for Avera is a boxer who has trained himself into a condition that does not require him to be rubbed and sponged between gongs.

BY MILDRED BARBOUR

AN ATTRACTIVE PLAYMATE AND A LONELY GIRL.

"I saw Reed last night at the Ritz," Marjorie told her mother over their morning coffee.

With unwonted maternal solicitude, Mrs. Boice-Nevins had come to insist upon breakfast shared together. Now she dropped sugar in her coffee cup and arched her pretty brows.

"Really? How awkward! Was he—unpleasant?"

"He merely bowed and passed on. But he spoke to Mr. Grosvenor."

The sugar tongs rattled in the silver basin.

"Heavens, were you with Cora's nephew when you met Reed? How very unfortunate!"

"Why?" inquired her daughter calmly.

Mrs. Boice-Nevins made a gesture of exasperation.

"My dear innocent, will you never appreciate discretion? . . . It won't do at all for Reed to see you in company with other men. He might get suspicious and take it into his head to divorce you and then where would we be?"

"Just where I want to be," retorted Marjorie. "I wish he would."

Her mother held up a pretty hand.

"We won't discuss that again, please. But take my advice and be careful about men. You're going to have a time as it is. Men are sure to be quite mad about you. You are young and beautiful and very innocent—and at the same time you are neither maid, wife nor widow. A piquant and very alluring situation, my dear."

"I think it's disgusting!" was Marjorie's candid reply.

She excused herself and sauntered out on the terrace.

"Where are you going?" Mrs. Boice-Nevils called after her.

"To play tennis with Mrs. Forester's nephew. He asked me last night and I've decided to accept."

"Well," her mother frowned judicially, "I daresay it will be all right if you play on our courts. Who is this young man, by the way?"

Marjorie shrugged. She looked very young and rebellious, standing there in the sunlight in her crimson sweater and white flannel skirt, with a crimson ribbon round her fair curls.

"I don't know. He seems nice enough. He's from Chicago and is stopping with Cora while his family's abroad, so he apparently doesn't work for a living."

"H-m-m! Independent means. . . I daresay he will make a safe playmate for you. Run along." Permission was thus graciously given.

Tom Grosvenor blessed his luck when he found his invitation of the previous night actually accepted.

Over the breakfast table he had learned a great deal from his aunt regarding this mysterious and beautiful young woman who bore the name of one of the richest and most prominent financiers in the country and yet merely bowed to him when she met him in the hotel lobby. Cora Forester had been faithful to Marjorie's confidence. She had merely outlined the situation as the world saw it for her nephew's benefit and left him to fill the gaps. He filled them in according to his light and the sum of his conclusions was that Hollister must be a bounder and deserved all he got for daring to marry and accord such treatment to a sweet, beautiful, innocent girl. All his chivalry was up in arms, and he was dangerously sympathetic.

Marjorie found him quite charming. After the game was finished and they rested on a rustic bench under a tree while the bright autumn leaves swirled around them and dropped like a benediction on Marjorie's blond curls, she discovered herself talking to him like a friend of long standing instead of a mere recent acquaintance. Indeed, she felt that she knew him better than anyone she had met in years. He was, in fact, the first grown man she had ever really talked to—aside from Reed Hollister, whose presence had frozen her confidences with fear.

She was experiencing real companionship with an attractive member of the opposite sex for the first time, and the realization was intriguing, to say the least.

During the weeks that followed, she saw a great deal of Tom Grosvenor. They played tennis together, rode together, had tea together in Mrs. Forester's pretty drawing room, dashed about the Long Island drives in his newly purchased roadster.

Mrs. Boice-Nevins, relaxing her vigilance in the successful materialization of her plans, had given herself up to an orgy of shopping preparatory for a winter of unrivalled social brilliance. Julie was remaining rather quietly at home, her social extravagances sharply curtailed by Norris' growing business anxieties. Leila had accompanied Ivan on a concert tour, and Dan was away at Harvard.

Only Cora Forester's keenly appreciative eyes noted the growing intimacy between her nephew and the lively young pseudo-widow next door. She watched them thoughtfully for a while, before she decided to mention the matter at all.

When she finally did, it was too late.

Ottawa, Ontario.—The total capital invested in the Canadian mining industry in 1922 has been reported at $403,694,823, including the sums actually invested in plant and equipment, the cost of materials and stocks on hand at the close of the year and the actual cash represented by the balances in the accounts of mine operators, according to the Dominion Bureau of statistics. The total value of the mineral production in the same year was reported as $184,297,242, made up of metallics, $62,120,291; non-metalics, $82,642,210; structural materials and clay products, $39,435,741. In the following year metals advanced 36 per cent in value and there was a net increase of 16.1 per cent over the whole field.

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—It is reported that there are no less than 200 prospectors working in the Rice Lake mineral district this year and that the total number of men engaged in mining activities is not less than 900. The Rice Lake district is what is known as the Southeastern Manitoba mineral area and lies east of Lake Winnipeg and north of the Winnipeg river.

BABY'S WELFARE

BY DR. ARTHUR G. BRETZ.

The articles appearing in this column have been prepared by a licensed graduate physician having many years of experience in dealing with the health and growth of the child, and are intended especially for those mothers who are so busy with daily household routine that they have not the time to read the many good books published or attend lectures on such subjects. No attempt will be made to prescribe medical or surgical treatment, nor to make a diagnosis of any illness.

Reprints of past articles can be obtained upon application to the Editor enclosing two-cent stamp for reply.

NURSING YOUR BABY.

The greatest attention that you can possibly give your baby will be to supply him with your breast milk. It is important therefore that you give special attention to the food that you eat in order that your breast milk may be prolonged. Breast milk is the best food for your baby—especially during the warm weather when bowel troubles are more frequent.

Your diet should consist mainly of green leafy vegetables, fresh fruit, and milk. Use meats sparingly. Drink plenty of water unless otherwise instructed by your physician. The more exercise you take and the more you are out in the open air the greater your appetite for the consumption of these foods will be, and therefore the greater the amount of milk you will have for your baby. Do not exercise to the point of fatigue. Avoid all food that disagrees with you, for the food that disagrees with you is likely to cause your milk to disagree with your baby. Please remember that you are now eating for two. You are not only eating to supply nourishment for for your own body, but you are also eating and drinking to supply milk that will contain the proper nourishment for your baby.

Regular movements of the bowels are necessary for nursing mothers. Do not dose with cathartics without consulting your doctor. These drugs will be transferred through your milk to the baby and produce undesirable effects. At this time you must take plenty of rest. Sleep eight hours in a room with windows opened. It is a good plan to lie down for at least an hour every afternoon.

Although breast milk is the safest food for your baby, the greatest care must be exercised to prevent contamination. Both the breasts and the nipples should be bathed with soap and water daily. The mother's hands should be freshly washed before she nurses the baby. Immediately before and after nursing, the nipples should be sponged with a piece of sterile gauze dipped in cold, sterile water. In between nursings the breasts should be covered with a piece of sterile gauze to protect them from contact with the clothing and to absorb any milk that might trickle out. The gauze used should be thin enough to permit a free circulation of air. Antiseptic solutions should not be used on the nipples as these cause an irritation which results in cracked or bleeding nipples and consequent painful nursing. If the nipples become sensitive to touch, expose them to the air for two hours twice daily. Bathing the nipples with cold water tends to harden them and prevents irritation. If the nipples become sore in spite of these precautions it is advisable to consult a physician immediately.

THE CONSTITUTION'S PATTERNS

A Practical "Cooking Set."

4768. Drill or cambric could be used for both cap and apron. Percale and gingham as well as rubberized chintz or cretonne are also attractive for this set.

The pattern is cut in one size, medium. It will require 1 3-4 yard for the apron, and 5-8-yard for the cap of 36-inch material. To trim with contrasting material as illustrated requires 1-2-yard 36 inches wide.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 10c in silver or stamps.

Send 12c in silver or stamps for our Up-to-date Spring and Summer 1924 Book of Fashions.

In ordering patterns write name and address plainly on a sheet of paper. Order by number and inclose price in silver or stamps. Do not mail letter to The Constitution building in Atlanta, but address as follows: Fashion Department, The Constitution, 1188-89 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

A Trio of Smart Summer Frocks

BY MME. LISBETH.

What shall I wear this summer? What clothes shall I get for vacation wear? These questions agitate us all sooner or later. Some of us wait until the last minute to decide and get our things, possibly partly because we cannot make up our minds where we will spend our summer and that does make a difference, of course.

Here is a trio of costumes that you might care to include in your trunk wherever you may roam. On the left is one of our old friends (the black and white ensemble) in a somewhat new guise. A two-piece suit consisting of black pleated black stitchery is combined with a white overblouse elaborately stitched in black. It is a very striking skirt with a band of white with costume and worn with it, as a matter of course, is a black and white hat.

In the center is a new jumper frock of sky blue flannel piped with white. It has a surplice effect and ties far over to the left. Any simple blouse may be worn under such a frock.

An attractive evening frock of very simple lines is seen on the right. Flesh colored crepe Canton is used for the model. A yoke and tiny sleeves are made of ecru lace and a cape and front panel of self material are finely pleated.

It does seem that the crepes have almost superseded the voiles, and other thin materials for summer wear this year. The season has been a backward one in many states with much rain, and such weather does not encourage the washable summer frocks. The shops are showing them to some extent and they will undoubtedly have their day a little later when friend summer really makes up her mind to get on the job.

With the Women of Today

BY MRS. LILLIAN CAMPBELL

Miss Gertrude Ely, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., one of the regional directors of the National League of Women Voters, is the original of the delightful heroine, "Gertrude" in "The Journal of a Mud House," a story of the adventures of two women in New Mexico, published last year. It was written by Miss Ely's sister, Mrs. Charles L. Tiffany, of New York city.

In this story she is described as "a whirl of blue serge, zestful laughter and sparkling eyeglasses." She is a vivacious speaker and tells many interesting stories of her experiences in France, where she spent two years as a Y. W. C. A. worker and in inducing women to take an interest in politics in this country.

Miss Ely is a native of Pennsylvania, a daughter of Theodore Ely, of Pennsylvania railroad fame, and a graduate of Bryn Mawr college. She has been a member of the board of the Bryn Mawr hospital for several years and was one of the organizers and a former president of the Philadelphia Junior league. She is also a member of the Hampton association (Va.), which is concerned with the education of negroes.

ODD BITS ABOUT WOMEN.

Mrs. Alice Donnellan LaBree, Boston, has proved that she can be an efficient mother to an 8-months-old child and at the same time take high scholastic honors. She recently was graduated from the Portia Law School of Boston.

America's oldest "war widow" is Mrs. Matilda Showacre, of New Market, Md. She was 104 last September. Mrs. Showacre has been a widow for more than 50 years. Her husband, Miss Gertrude Ely.

George Showacre, served with the Maryland militia under General Jackson in the war of 1812. She has been drawing a government pension for 45 years.

Miss Mary O'Leary, an expert worker in the government printing office at Washington, has an unusual job. She prepares the gold used in lettering the 1,400,000 cloth-bound books issued every year by the government.

Miss Dorothy McBirney, daughter of James McBirney, president of the National Bank of Commerce, Tulsa, Okla., was chosen queen of the National Indian convention held in Tulsa. She is a Creek Indian and a graduate of Pine Manor schools at Wellesley.

Gleanings From Book of Life

THE PART OF EXPERIENCE AND Humanism.

"Experience is a process that continually gives us new material to digest. We handle this intellectually by the mass of beliefs of which we find ourselves already possessed, assimilating, rejecting or rearranging in different degrees. Some of the apperceiving ideas are recent acquisitions of our own, but most of them are common-sense traditions of the race.

"There is probably not a common-sense tradition, of all those which we now live by, that was not in the first instance a genuine discovery, an inductive generalization like those more recent ones of the atom, of inertia, of energy, of reflex action or of fitness to survive."

When William James, master psychologist, found himself playing sympathetically with humanism, this was something like what he perceived it to mean.

"The notions of one Time and of one Space as single continuous receptacles; the distinction between thoughts and things, matter and mind; between permanent subjects and changing attributes; the conception of classes with sub-classes within them; the separation of the fortuitous from regularly caused connections; surely all of these were once definite conquests made at historic dates by our ancestors in their attempts to get the chaos of their crude individual experiences into a more shareable and manageable shape.

"They proved of such sovereign use as denkmittel that they are now part of the very structure of our mind. We cannot play fast and loose with them. No experience can upset them. On the contrary, they apperceive every experience and assign it to its place.

"To what effect? That we may the better foresee the course of our experiences, communicate with one another, and steer our lives by rule. And also that we may have a cleaner, clearer, more inclusive mental view."

"The greatest common-sense achievement, after the discovery of one Time and one Space, is probably the concept of permanently existing things.

"When a rattle first drops out of the hands of a baby, he does not look to see where it is gone. Nonperception he accepts as annihilation until he finds a better belief. That our perceptions mean beings, rattles that are there whether we hold them in our hands or not, becomes an interpretation so luminous of what happens to us that, once employed, it never gets forgotten."

"Truth means, according to humanism," wrote James in this essay ("Humanism and Truth"), "the relation of less fixed parts of experience (predicates) to other relatively more fixed parts (subjects); and we are not required to seek it in relation of experience as such to anything beyond itself. We may stay at home, for our behavior as experiments is hemmed in on every side. The forces both of advance and resistance are exerted by our own objects, and the notion of truth as something opposed to waywardness or license inevitably grows up inside of every human life."

Vancouver, British Columbia.—During the first four months of 1924 a total of 164,000,000 feet of lumber was exported from Vancouver to China, Japan, Australia, United Kingdom, France, Belgium, Italy, South Africa, India, Hawaii, South Seas, United States, South America, Mexico and Siberia. During the same period of 1923 the port shipped 74,000,000 feet, and in the first four months of 1922 the export total was 65,000,000 feet. The movement this season means that at least 80 deepsea ships loaded at Vancouver with lumber, as the average parcel shipment is estimated to be about 2,000,000 feet per vessel.

BEAUTY CHATS

By Edna K. Forbes

ASTRINGENTS.

This is a period when astringents are particularly valuable. The hot season is good for a muddy complexion and for an oily skin, since it opens the pores and lets them give out their contents; but it also has a tendency to make any skin too relaxed. Half an hour's profuse perspiration is as good as the most scientifically taken steam bath. The only trouble is that the continued heat keeps the skin related and the pores open, whereas the properly given steaming is finished by an astringent treatment.

Now astringents, in beauty culture, are anything which will draw up or tighten the skin. The mild astringents merely close up large or open pores. The strong astringents draw up the skin so thoroughly that they draw up the msucles underneath as well. Usually these last are made up as mud packs or as pastes, for the greater convenience of applying, and are for deep wrinkles and sagging muscles and such troubles.

For ordinary cases of coarse pores, of faint scars resulting from pimples, or for an oily skin, I have an excellent astringent formula which I'll be glad to send any reader. (Send a stamped and self addressed envelope for it, so there'll be no mistake about addresses and names.) It's a little better than the usual milky solution made of tincture of benzoin and water, but it's easily made up at home. Like any astringent, it should be applied only after the skin has been thoroughly cleansed, then it should be patted on all over the face and allowed to dry.

Ice is always splendid for this purpose, but not so convenient to use. Ice stimulates, too, and brings out color in a pale face.

Mrs. A. H. W.—Pregnancy is no excuse any longer for neglecting the teeth. If you need a dentist there is no reason why you should not go to one and have all your teeth cared for at this time. If you neglect to go it may mean loss of teeth later.

You could renew the facing of your hat using black satin for a complete change from what it was formerly.

Mrs. B .G.—There is no reason why any one should shampoo with hard water, as enough rain water could be caught and bottled for this purpose. Massage the scalp every day in order to increase circulation, and the dandruff may disappear.

Tomorrow—Answered Letters.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

SLAMS AND SALAAMS

By Louise Dooly

SING of June nights and the moon light. There are clouds enough on this particular night to relieve with a bit of drama—for perhaps a storm brews in them—the lyric flow of silver light which, without the clouds, would be unbearable in fullness of placid beauty.

No smothering roof shuts off from the terrace the spell of it all. Far away the lights of the city take on a witchingness which is not of their own, but belongs to the night, and music from within the house borrows enchantment from the scene it floats out upon.

What exquisiteness in such a setting does solitude assume. Of course we mean—

Solitude a deux.

For the June moon is the honeymoon.

* * * *

A THING APART.

THEY had been married a week. They were enduring their first separation.

The bride was playing golf with another woman; the groom with another man.

The ladies tired first, and sought rest and a lemonade on the clubhouse veranda.

After while the two men passed the club house at some distance in the course of their game. The ladies could see them, but they could not see the ladies.

The bride hopefully and fervently waved at the groom, but naturally there was no response.

She dropped back into her chair, and in a still voice full of pathos, she said to the older married woman:

"Men don't love as women do."

The older woman coldly respond, "Well certainly no poet has ever handed it down that it's man's whole existence."

* * * *

WHY THEY LEAVE HOME.

THIS is the season when the grand annual scattering begins of the American parents' money on sons and daughters they are sending abroad to "travel."

Unplanned orgies they are most frequently—unplanned except by Cook's as to trains and hotels.

And what do most of the young people get out of it? About as much as the girl who was asked if she visited Rome while she was in Europe.

"Rome? Rome? O yes, I believe we did. Susan," to one of her traveling companions, "wasn't it in Rome we got those blue earrings."

There is one father, however, who is making his children's travel actually a part of their education. Before visiting a foreign country, one or two of the four must know enough of the language to carry them through. Since South America for this summer has long been their goal, two of the young people have for a long time included Spanish in their college work.

The four are required by their father to keep a daily diary which is mailed home each night, and filed by him to be bound in the complete account of the trip.

The daily notes need not be long, but they are obligatory, and obviously they serve both to make more permanent the travelers' impressions as they go, and to preserve them from the possible oblivion of a crowding multitude of impressions.

A glance over the diary of a former trip—around the world—shows that these daily impressions are no cut-and-dried guide book notes, but have the personal, the human things that will make them always a keepsake and interesting to other people as well as themselves.

In India for instance such a marvel as the Taj Mahal gets its fitting recognition in the diary, but there is no lack of local color in such outbursts from the boys as—

"Gee, but it's hot. And the bugs. . . . ."

* * * *

WHO GETS THE TRUNK?

MY wife's fussing because I didn't bring my dinner clothes," said the man who had just arrived at the summer hotel with his family in their car for the week-end.

"But she fussed so much before we left home about the amount of clothes I did bring, that I was afraid to suggest that she put my dinner coat in her suit case.

"You see, a man's clothes are heavier and more bundlesome than a woman's—golf clothes, and sport clothes besides, and big shoes, and so on. They filled the trunk.

"Women's clothes can be squeezed into anything these days, so my wife and daughter used the suit case. It looked like imposition to ask them to take care of the dinner coat, too."

Now that's a true story. Ask the man. Or his wife.

Who says women are the extravagant sex?

* * * *

WE heard a woman in politics complaining that in spite of women's hard work in getting out the voters, they receive little or no recognition from the men in appointments.

We have heard that several times.

We usually answer: Do men in politics get appointments out of gratitude for service done? Yes, they do not.

That is, unless they have something further to give.

A French definition for gratitude would well fit the political kind:

"Gratitude is a lively sense of favors yet to come."

The women need expect political preferment only as the men get it. To the men it is seldom handed on a silver salver. They have to grub for it.

And the best way for them to acquire it is organization, and work through organization. The more women there are organized, either in their own political bodies or in the men's, the greater will be their political influence, and, the greater therefore, their opportunity in the counsels as well as the perquisites of their party.

* * * *

FAVORS YET TO COME.

THE national democratic party very plainly has appreciated from the first the potential, if not the actual, value of the woman vote.

(Better than the women do, for the women are not voting.)

The women are given equal representation in the membership of the democratic national committee. They have had it for four years.

Now the republicans have seen the light—or the rolling pin.

The women are not voting in great numbers in some sections of the country.

Neither are the men. Only fifty per cent who were eligible in 1920 exercised the previlege of the ballot.

But four hundred and sixty-five women will attend the convention in New York Tuesday as delegates or alternates; nearly twice as many as were included in the official representation in 1920.

The women politicians, then, like the men politicians, are active on the job.

Are women in general going to leave the job, as men in general do, to the men and women politicians?

* * * *

WHY don't you have your hair bobbed?" somebody asked pretty Mrs. Smith.

"I'm afraid to. My little daughter says that if I get a bob, she'll push her hair back, and show her ears."

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Cabbage.

If the cabbage is new and young it requires less than half an hour's boiling, and less water is necessary than for old cabbage.

Cause It to Grow.

A little castor oil applied to the roots of the household plant that appears to be dying will frequently revive it and cause it to live.

Avoid the Accident.

If the burner is turned so high on the oil stove that you cannot turn it down again, throw a handful of salt on the flaming wick. It will put it out immediately.

A Mop Test.

When buying a new dry mop, shake it and see if strings show individually and do not mat together. A good quality mop will have strings that practically stand alone.

Removing Paint.

Frequently, when the house is being painted, unsightly spots are spattered on the front steps. Make a strong solution of potash and wash the steps, leaving the solution to sink in. When the paint becomes dry, wash it off with soap and water. Rinse finally with cold water.

On the United States government farm for bees are found 3,750,000 of the finest Italian specimens, which are used for observation purposes.

The islands of Hawaii are constantly being built up from the ocean by portions of glass ejected by volcanoes, which form new land.

The Rapid Growth of Atlanta A Surprise to Our Visitors

The growth of Atlanta from one year to another is of much surprise to the constant stream of visitors who visit our fair city at least once a year.

To those that try to remember Atlanta as it was a few years ago when they were with us, surprise indeed would be there were they to see Atlanta as it is today.

While the changes in the downtown districts were the most noticed by the people yet the changes in most all parts of the city is remarkable also.

If a traveling man is out of town a month or six weeks he is astonished to see what was a vacant field when he went away to be occupied by a dozen or more houses or a big apartment house and people living in them as if they were even as late as a decade ago what was then a small old building or vacant lot is today occupied by a tall and busy skyscraper or hotel.

If a picture of Atlanta's downtown skyline is taken one year it is out of date the next, as a couple of fourteen or fifteen-story buildings is erected or additions made to what we have about every year, and last year's picture does not do justice to the scene.

Again the remarkable improvements in our city streets are a pleasing surprise to those who only remember us as having poor and unpaved streets.

All the merchants, professional people and live wires on these pages are taking an active part in the building of a greater Atlanta, and there is no one more interested in the great future of this rapidly growing city than they are.

The C. A. Dunham Company Improves Heating Service

Recognizing Atlanta as the distributing point for this section, the C. A. Dunham Company opened sales offices here in 1922 and from that beginning a splendid growth has been made, serving the local trade and the territory adjacent to Atlanta. This is only one of the many such typical examples of corporations choosing Atlanta for southern headquarters.

The local sales office is managed by W. K. Andrews, a direct factory representative, who has been in the service of the C. A. Dunham company for eight years and brings with him an experience which promotes better heating systems better installed. Mr. Andrews reports an effective demand for the Dunham product and service; based on the established merits of the system, and the personal attention given each installation.

There is a Dunham system of heating for every size and type of building. Steam at very low pressure is the heating medium and distribution is made through a system of piping to each radiator in the system, and with the Dunham specialties installed no water or foul air is hissed or blown into the rooms.

It was mentioned above that steam at very low pressure is employed as the heating medium. This is a most important factor, and especially in the south with our light and flexible climate—steam at low pressure is also light and flexible—it may be quickly generated and again quickly dampered, giving heat when wanted and as the weather moderates, as in the middle of the day, it may be easily throttled down. Thus low pressure steam serves the two factors of personal comfort and economy.

Those who are now building, also prospective builders, may get information direct from the local offices of the Dunham company, which are located in the Forsyth building, or this service may be obtained through their architect or engineer. Dunham Heating Service cooperates in the design and installation of that system of heating best suited to the individual requirements of each building to be heated. For heating systems now installed, which are inefficient and coal-wasting, these may be "Dunhamized," and information for this service may be obtained direct from the local offices of the company.

Thos. F. Seitzinger's Sons Increasing Their Facilities

The American people in the hustle to manufacture and produce new goods have to a great extent overlooked the saving and reclaiming of waste material and while many firms in the days gone by should have paid good dividends the huge waste pile out in the back lot very often ate up their profits.

Up until about the beginning of the present century there were few people to see the great possibilities in the reclaiming of waste materials and especially was this so in the south.

Atlanta is now recognized as the leading city in the south in this line and there are several firms that handle several carloads of waste material every week. One of the largest is the Thomas L. Seitzinger & Sons, whose large plant and offices at 872 Ashby street cover over 5 acres of land and they receive 4 and 5 carloads of scrap material every week from all parts of the south. They in turn ship 2 and 3 carloads of material out again every week that is produced from the scrap material they receive.

As the several kinds of scrap metals are received they are sorted and sent to the foundry where they are made into "pigs" and ingots. So that the scrap metals, no matter where they come from or what kind they are, are quickly converted into marketable products by this enterprising firm.

With their splendid foundry facilities they can make all kinds of brass, bronze and aluminum castings. They also make all grades of babbit metals and alloys.

This firm carries a large stock of sheet copper, brass, aluminum and zinc and all grades of solder, type metals, pig and ingot lead, tin, copper and aluminum, also bars, tubing, rods and plates of every description.

Frank B. Baldwin Now With Barrett-Watson Company

The Barrett-Watson company, mill supply dealers of 35 South Forsyth, announces that Frank B. Baldwin is now connected with them and is on the road covering the state of Georgia.

According to H. D. Watson, vice president, Mr. Baldwin is sending in some splendid orders from different parts of the state and adding many new customers to those they already have.

Mr. Watson also stated that his firm was receiving large orders for the Dayton safety ladder, which is one of the best step ladders ever put on the market.

This ladder, in addition to being extra reinforced, has the advantage of having an extension of the back brace that extends about 30 inches above the top step or platform, so that a 200-pound workman standing on the top with his knees braced against top member of back legs can bend his body at any angle up to 45 degrees, giving him the advantage of reaching in any direction with both hands.

This ladder can be folded up like the ordinary step ladder and the fact that it has so many features never before combined in any ladder makes it a real safety ladder for the home, store or factory.

Barrett-Watson are also Georgia sales agents for the Dickbelt works, of Passaic, N. J.

The "Dickbelt" has been on the market over 30 years and is well known to the transmission world and this firm recommends it very highly on account of its great strength, durability, perfect uniformity throughout, complete immunity to water and steam, absence of stretch and shrinkage and strong gripping power, insuring the transmission without loss of the whole power given off by the engine.

This firm also represents the Crane Packing company, of Chicago, giving a complete service in flexible metallic packing, and carries in stock more than 40 kinds of compressors, pumps, valve joints and feeds.

They are also Georgia agents for the Armstrong steam traps made by the Armstrong Machine works of Three Rivers, Mich.

The Armstrong steam trap is made on a different principle from the ordinary steam trap and the fundamental principle is the inverted submerged bucket being covered by a basic patent and it is the only one of its type manufactured.

Engineers that are familiar with all types of steam traps acknowledge this Armstrong steam trap as the best.

Barrett-Watson is also having a splendid business in its several other lines and it extends a cordial welcome to any of its friends to come and see it and out-of-town folks are invited to make the store headquarters while they are in town.

Local Concern Is Making Success in Screen Business

Fly time is screen time. "Screen well once," is the slogan used by R. M. Callaway & Son. "Now is the time to get estimates on screen work that will last a life time."

R. M. Callaway stated that his firm represents the Bostwick-Goodell company, of Norwalk, Ohio; Acme Metal Manufacturing company, of Chicago, Ill., and W. J. Baker company, of Newport, Ky. These firms are among the largest manufacturers of Venetian blinds, fly screens, steel window screens, rustless metal frames, etc., in the United States. In addition to handling screens the Callaway people manufacture a superior metal weather strip for windows and doors.

Only screens that are guaranteed from rust are used by this well-known firm.

The "Monarch Weather Strips" are handled by Callaway & Son. This organization has had the agency for this well-known and famous metal weather strip for many years and carry in stock enough to meet all demands at any time.

Some of the recent jobs for screenings are the following:

Pershing Point apartments, Stratford hall, Canterbury Manor, Peachtree Terrace, 696 Peachtree apartments, St. George apartments, Bonaventure Arms, Ross Hunter apartments and the Claridge Manor. There have been several other jobs completed by the Callaway company and some few contracts signed for work to begin shortly.

Recently R. F. Callaway became associated with this firm, which has for twenty years been operating under the name of R. M. Callaway company. For fifteen years activities in the screen and metal weather strip business were transacted from offices in the Fourth National Bank building.

Sales offices, store rooms, general offices and workshop are now located at 705 Peachtree street. The Callaway firm has recently taken this beautiful building and has gone to considerable expense decorating the sales room with Victoria Venetian blinds, doors and screens.

"We would like for the people of Atlanta or anyone who is interested in our line to come into our new place and get our estimates as well as look over our line," stated Mr. Callaway.

Firm Successful In Erecting Largest Tank Ever Made

The R. D. Cole Manufacturing company, of Newnan, Ga., which is very likely the oldest concern of its kind in the state of Georgia, having been established in 1854 and have operated their plant at Newnan continuously since that date, have just completed for the city of Charlotte, N. C., what is considered a very unique job, being an elevated steel tank, containing a million gallons of water and supported on a steel tower giving an elevation of 140 feet. This is the second largest job of its kind every attempted in this country, and its successful completion is quite a compliment to the engineering skill and manufacturing facilities of this well known Georgia concern.

The R. D. Cole Manufacturing company are exclusive manufacturers of elevated steel tanks, both for fire protection service and domestic supply, and are the pioneer builders of the self-supporting bottom type of tank. Some idea can be gained of the dimensions of the tank recently completed at Charlotte, as being 56 feet in diameter and the shell of the tank being approximately 90 feet in depth. The tower which supports this is composed of twelve columns, each of these being of massive steel members measuring 24 by 28 inches. The job contains some very unique engineering and structural features and is used to supply the city of Charlotte, N. C., with their filtered water.

It might be interesting to state that this enterprising Georgia concern has built elevated tanks of this character in the east and in fact throughout the United States. They recently issued a very interesting circular which indicated construction extending from Nashua, New Hampshire, to Honduras.

One of the most unique jobs built by this concern is just being completed in New Orleans, La., for Cloverland Dairies. The tank itself being in the shape of a gigantic milk bottle, containing 20,000 gallons of water and is used to supply the automatic sprinklers of this building, and at the same time to advertise from its general outline the character of the business. The tank being an exact shape of the standard milk bottle used in the distribution of their product.

ATLANTA, CITY OF BEAUTIFUL HOMES

Atlanta is becoming world-wide famous for its many beautiful homes, well appointed apartment houses, tall office buildings, substantial banking institutions, large city, county, state and federal buildings, and its nearly 100 schools, colleges and other educational institutions. Much of the credit of Atlanta's fame in this matter is due to the many splendid architects here who are cooperating in every way with the owners and builders to build as nice buildings as can be built.

One of the foremost architects of Atlanta and vicinity is William J. J. Chase, of 140 Peachtreet street, who is doing all he can to help uphold Atlanta's reputation for beautiful and substantial buildings and he and his assistants are kept very busy in the drawing of new plans and the supervision of new buildings being erected. At the present this busy office has the plans of seven school buildings in the office, two of these schools now being in the course of erection. Plans for two more completed and plans for three are under way.

In addition to these schools Mr. Chase has the plans of several handsome homes and the other buildings under way, all of which will add much to Atlanta in the near future.

"TUBBY" WALTON FINDS OLD RELIC

"Tubby" Walton and his father were showing with much pride Saturday at their restaurant, 140 Whitehall street, an old 8-day clock that was nearly 150 years old and was bought new by Tubby's great-great grandfather.

Mr. Walton, Sr., stated that the old relic would adorn their walls and keep step with Father Time.

PISTOL MARKSMAN SLAIN BY NEGRO

St. Louis, June 22.—Lieutenant Sidney E. Sears, 57, nationally-known revolver expert and crack shot of the St. Louis police department, was shot four times and killed today as he sat in a police automobile in front of a negro tenement house, where he and two other officers were investigating an alleged negro fight.

Special Officers George Stowell and Peter Merglekamp, who accompanied Lieutenant Sears, had entered the building and were going to the second floor when they saw a large negro jump from a rear porch, and shortly after heard five shots fired. Running to the street, they found Lieutenant Sears lying dead in the rear seat of the car.

A search of the neighborhood resulted in the arrest of Will Lashley, 43, a negro, who was found crouching in a yard. A large revolver containing five empty shells was found lying near him.

Lieutenant Sears' revolver, with one shot fired, was found in the car.

Lashley admitted to police tonight that he fired the shots that killed Sears. He said as he walked along the street past the tenement house, a man dressed in civilian clothes seated in an automobile called to him. Lashley said that the man held a pistol in his hand, and that inasmuch as he did not know the man was a police officer, he drew his revolver and started firing.

"He (Sears) fired one shot at me," Lashley said, "and I ran into the gangway, where the policemen later found me."

MERCER STUDENT WILL BE PASTOR OF MACON CHURCH

Macon, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—George G. Kimsey, of Cohutta, a Mercer university ministerial student, has accepted a call to the assistant pastorate of the Second Baptist church of this city. Mr. Kimsey, who recently graduated from the Mercer school of theology, is probably the youngest pastor in Macon, and one of the few ministerial students to be in school and also hold a full-time pastorate.

During the past year he has been in evangelistic work for the Baptist state mission board. Before coming to Mercer he attended the Maryville and Berea colleges, of Kentucky.

OPPONENT NEEDS CARE OF DOCTOR, ASSERTS VICTIM

L. A. Greene, 19-year-old schoolboy, of 15 Hardendorf avenue, suffered a severe wound over the left eye in a fight said to have been staged at Spiller's park Sunday afternoon. He was treated at the Grady hospital and allowed to go home.

Greene did not give the name of his opponent, but intimated that he would show up as a patient at some hospital. He also was silent as to the cause of the fight.

All Bond Prices Continue Upward Move During Week

New York, June 22.—Sporadic outbursts of profit-taking interrupted but did not halt the upward movement of bond prices last week. Although trading after the previous week's record-breaking business, the strong underlying demand for investment securities continued to exert a tonic effect on the market. At the close of the week the average price of leading foreign obligations was in new high ground for the year, but that of domestic issues, after attaining a record level, fell back slightly.

Establishment of many new 1924 high records in the foreign list was said to reflect the search for higher yields, which were cut down by the rapid rise in coropration liens, and to foreshadow a large volume of foreign financing. At the same time a decline in United States government bonds indicated a transfer of surplus funds into lower priced investments, notably federal land bank obligations, of which a $35,000,000 issue was placed on the market.

International bankers refused to admit that any important foreign loans were being prepared for early flotation. Expressing satisfaction with current bond market conditions, however, they asserted that new financing could easily be absorbed despite the normal summer lapse in activity. Meanwhile the intimation from federal reserve sources that the recent cut in the rediscount rate should prove a boon to foreign financing, and sharp rallies in Austrian, French, Belgian, Serbian and South American bonds, were considered significant.

Although new offerings for the week approximated $100,000,000, this total failed to measure the volume of bonds actually distributed. Private sales of several large railroad issues, including $18,000,000 Chesapeake and Ohio equipments and $10,000,000 Rock Island notes, reflected the keen demand for high grade securities.

The continued ease of money rates resulted in unusually favorable terms for new state and municipal loans. North Carolina borrowed $2,000,000 for a short term at 2 1-2 per cent and sold a $10,000,000 bond issue at a premium. An offering of New Jersey bonds also commanded a substantial premium. Trading in domestic bonds during the week was marked by frequent unloading of liens acquired on the current upswing. Where profits were realized, however, funds usually were turned back into other sections of the market. Shifting operations reduced the gains of Liberty bonds as buyers sought higher yielding railroad, public utility and industrial issues.

Price movements of several railroad mortgages were influenced by individual developments. Denver and Rio Grande issues advanced smartly as the reorganization plan was put into operation. International Great Northern bonds were affected adversely by court action to block the merger of the road with the Gulf Coast lines, but rallied sharply as the sale was completed despite this move.

Dull Trading During Week Marks New Orleans Market

New Orleans, La., June 22.—Cotton last week experienced dull trading, narrow fluctuations, and lack of definite trend to prices, the like of which the trade has not known in a considerable period. Prices fluctuated from day to day, sometimes up, sometimes down, but at the close Saturday, October showed a net loss of only 14 points compared with the previous week.

The July position had a somewhat different experience, however, due to the peculiar conditions surrounding the liquidation of the last remaining old crop option. While the new crop positions fluctuated in accordance with the character of the weather, and reports as to the progress of the growing crop, July was influenced by developments in connection with the liquidation of the month, rendered more important because of the near approach of the first notice day for July deliveries, which will occur this week. It was generally expected that quite a number of notices of delivery would be issued here, and as a result July was sold rather freely, closing the week 91 points down, compared with the closing price of the previous week. As a result, the discount of October under July was narrowed to 276 points, as compared with a difference of 353 points week before last.

The prices for new crop positions were sustained early in the week by the hot weather in Texas and Oklahoma, which many contended was injurious to the growing crop. Later on, however, the tone was easier, owing to a moderation of the heat wave and good rains in the southwest. Despite the effect of the cooler weather and rains on the market, bullish sentiment was held in check by the fear that the many private condition reports due, during this week, may show a falling off in condition during June, or at least a lack of improvement over the low condition reported by the government on June 2, based on reports of an average date of May 25. The market is consequently in a waiting attitude, which accounted for the recent very narrow range of fluctuations.

Financial Circles Steady; Business Conditions Fair

New York, June 22.—Plentiful supplies of money seeking employment, and a firm undertone in most securities and commodity markets, were the main characteristics of the past week in finance and business. When the week opened the markets had sustained a nine-day advance, and the majority of observers predicted at least a temporary halt, partly on expected profit taking, and partly on the belief that the extent of the rise indicated that much of the buying needs for investment purposes had been satisfied.

While the security markets were resting, the bulk of the industrial news received during the week indicated that readjustment of manufacturing operations to conform to stocks of commodities on hand and current consumption demand was still going on. Sharp curtailment in the production and sale of motor vehicles adversely affected manufacturing lines dependent on the automobile industry. Despite efforts made earlier in the year to reduce stocks and to cut down output of tires, the leading tire companies decided last week to lower prices in the hope of stimulating sales. Reductions averaging ten per cent were announced by important factors in the trade.

Meanwhile, the situation in the oil industry remained in delicate balance. Consumption of gasoline increased with the warmer weather, but was insufficient to remove the menace of record surplus stocks, in view of the continued high output of crude oil. Under these circumstances, the leading producers in the mid-continent field, in an effort to maintain present price levels, sought further curtailment of production.

Proration by the pipe lines was resorted to in an effort to remedy the situation.

Further reduction in steel output accompanied a decline in consumption. While the tangible evidence was mostly unfavorable there were scattered indications of improvement. Steel ingot production, which is now at a rate of about 45 per cent of capacity, decreased but slightly, and competent observers predicted that the low point in mill production would hardly come later than the middle of July, with a rate of perhaps 40 per cent. Liquidation in the steel market, it was felt, was almost completed, and the number and character of orders received by mills gave evidence that the turn might be near. Activity was expected to increase in the automobile industry with the introduction of new models next month.

Financial and business quarters last week gave an increasing share of their attention to the sharp recovery in the wheat market. Wheat had a sharp and consistent rise, following publication of the government's lower crop estimate. The advance carried prices of futures up nearly 15 cents a bushel, and the trade confidently predicted that the market's strength would be sustained by an estimated shortage in the world's supply. With wheat selling on a basis to yield the farmers a profit, business felt that much progress would be made in healing over a sore spot of long standing, and that with increased purchasing power, farming communities might go far to offset a decline in buying from industrial centers.

Owner at Church Home Is Entered And $500 Stolen

Burglars entered the store of Mrs. L. N. Crawford at 601 Chestnut street while she was at church Sunday night and rifled a secret hiding place of approximately $500.

Entrance was gained by filing the iron bars on the windows and breaking the glass. Mrs. Crawford, who lives in the rear of the establishment, had hidden the money on a high shelf in her bedroom.

Loses His Watch.

Two burglaries were reported to detectives Sunday morning.

One was the work of a "second-story" artist, who stole $75 and a gold watch from the bedroom of E. Natkoff, 127 Capitol avenue. The robber worked so quietly that the slumber of the victim was unbroken by his intrusion.

The other robbery occurred at J. P. Allen's department store, when the large plate-glass window on the Broad street side was smashed. Just what was taken had not been reported late Sunday night.

Window Shattered.

A front window of the Walk-Over Shoe company at 35 Whitehall street was found shattered Sunday night by a policeman on his beat.

Nothing was reported stolen, but police are inclined to believe that it was broken with the intention of robbing the store. Officers guarded the store during the night.

Woman Watches As "Other Man" Shoots Husband

Macon, Ga., June 22.—H. L. Lanier, 51, painter, was shot down on the street this afternoon when he passed the home of H. E. Kitchens, where Lanier's wife was living.

The shooting is alleged to have been done by Kitchens, who, witnesses say, exclaimed, "I've got you where I want you."

After Kitchens emptied his gun, a mob began to form for the expressed purpose of lynching him. Officers arriving from police headquarters on motorcycles dispersed the mob, and placed Kitchens under arrest. He is being held without bail.

Six shots were fired, four entering the body of Lanier, two piercing his intestines. Two shots went wild and narrowly missed eye-witnesses of the tragedy.

Mrs. Lanier told police that Kitchens shot in self-defense, but eye-witnesses told police that Lanier was unarmed, and that after Kitchens shot Lanier in the back, he continued to fire into his body as Lanier lay prostrate on the ground, begging for mercy.

Kitchens returned to the house, and was in conversation with Mrs. Lanier when the police arrived.

Kitchens gave his age as 36. Mrs. Lanier says she is 41. Kitchens was a former textile worker, but was out of work.

Doctors at a hospital state that there is little chance for Lanier to live.

Before he became unconscious, Lanier charged that Kitchens had stolen his wife several months ago, but he denied that he precipitated the clash this afternoon.

SALESMEN—A large manufacturing concern, backed by 25 years' experience, rated AA-1, at intervals since the first of the year has been adding to their sales force as busines justified it, and right now want two heavy-hitting, high-powered salesmen, who are looking for a permanent position where their efforts bring them a good round sum of money. By this we mean men who can earn from $500 to $1,000 a month, and keep their feet on the ground. Some of our men were of character who seldom read ads for new connections, and others never had any selling experience before joining us. Our men are making commissions of from $500 to $1,200 per month, and some even more. Our device is of such character that it has an irresistible appeal to merchants, it is an unfailing profit-maker and that is the first essential to the success of any business. We want men above average ability, clean records, who are able to talk convincingly, and forget the eight-hour day when they are out on the firing line. We will train you if we accept you and guarantee you commissions on all sales in your territory, whether you make the deals or not. You need not apply if you are under 26 years of age. If you can qualify call Monday at 807 Forsyth building from 9 to 12 and 2 to 5.

HATS.
By George S. Chappell.

We talk of the many varieties
Of birds, and of bees and of flowers,
And numerous learned societies
Discourse on the subject for hours,
But though I have worked long upon it
I've never discovered a tome
That properly dealt with the bonnet,
That crown of the feminine dome.

They stick on some fur or a feather,
They drape 'em in color or black,
And often it's hard to know whether
The front is the front or the back.
They make 'em demure and girl's-schoolish,
Recalling the old-fashioned poke,
And often they're simply plum foolish,
Just a silly, old milliner's joke.

And sometimes they're nothing, dog-gone 'em,
You'd think they'd be cheap but they're not,
For the prices those bimbos put on 'em
Would knock you clean out of the lot.
But the thing that I marvel at mostly
When I gaze around on the street,
Is, though the hats are crazy and costly,
The wearers, God bless 'em, look sweet!

have too much pride to throw myself twice at a girl."

"Arthur, I tell you I can't help it. It's absurd, but it's true. And if you really love me, you'll be decent; you'll tolerate the whim of a foolish girl."

"Oh, I'll be decent. Meanwhile, Muriel—May I?" He put his hands about her face, raising it to meet his lips. She suffered him to complete the lover's act, not too much engrossed in it to miss the easy grace and aplomb with which it was carried through.

"You're divine!" he said huskily.

She reached out a hand, trailing her fingers slowly over his hair. Then she linked her arm through his and walked with him down to the house.

Muriel's breakfast was brought to her room at ten o'clock next morning. She hadn't slept well, and now she had no appetite. Her emotions were complex, but above all ran the disturbing conviction that on the previous evening she had not been rational—not with Arthur Fane, at all events. There was no real reason why she should have put him off. Fane was wealthy, handsome, splendidly connected; his appeal was undeniable. Women talked about him, but what bachelor in his position would not provide material for talk of the sort? He loved her. That was a triumph—a triumph that would requite the Trines for all they had done for her. And she could hold him; she had all the confidence of a high-spirited girl's pride as to this. She had expected him to propose—everyone had; and she had waited for it. And then. . . . She pushed the breakfast tray to one side and arose without ringing for the maid who had been assigned to her.

No one was downstairs save the servants. And the morning was delightful—one of those early July mornings when the sky is blue and perspectives are veiled in luminous haze. Loitering upon the veranda with a book she could not read, there came at length the sound for which she now came to realize she had been waiting—the distant drone of an airplane.

"I think," said the butler, appearing upon the veranda, "that may be Mrs. Trine's seaplane. She told me to watch for him."

"You needn't mind, Watson. I'll go down to the boathouse and meet him." Muriel smiled graciously. "It'll be rather thrilling, and I'll enjoy the walk."

She stepped from the veranda, hurrying down the path that led to the river.

The seaplane came boiling up to the boathouse wharf as Muriel arrived. She stood watching the helmeted figure as he busied himself about the cockpit. It was undoubtedly Donald Graydon; yet she was strangely unmoved. Or if she was moved, her mood lay along the line of resentment that he had been the cause of a footless evening.

Making the 'plane fast, he stepped to the wharf and advanced to the girl. His square face, with its crown of crisp, crinkling brown hair, was held high; the dauntless hazel eyes were burning.

"Hello, Muriel!"

"Then you knew I was here? You are not surprised?"

"No. I knew you were here. You see, I have been reading the social columns of the New York papers of late. So I've been able to follow you pretty well."

"I see. I thought perhaps—" She shrugged.

"Muriel—"

She interpreted the hard lines that had crept into his face.

"Donald, don't."

"We have to talk, Muriel. Ever since the day I called and you sent down word you were dressing and were not in to callers—"

"You waited until you had been back a month."

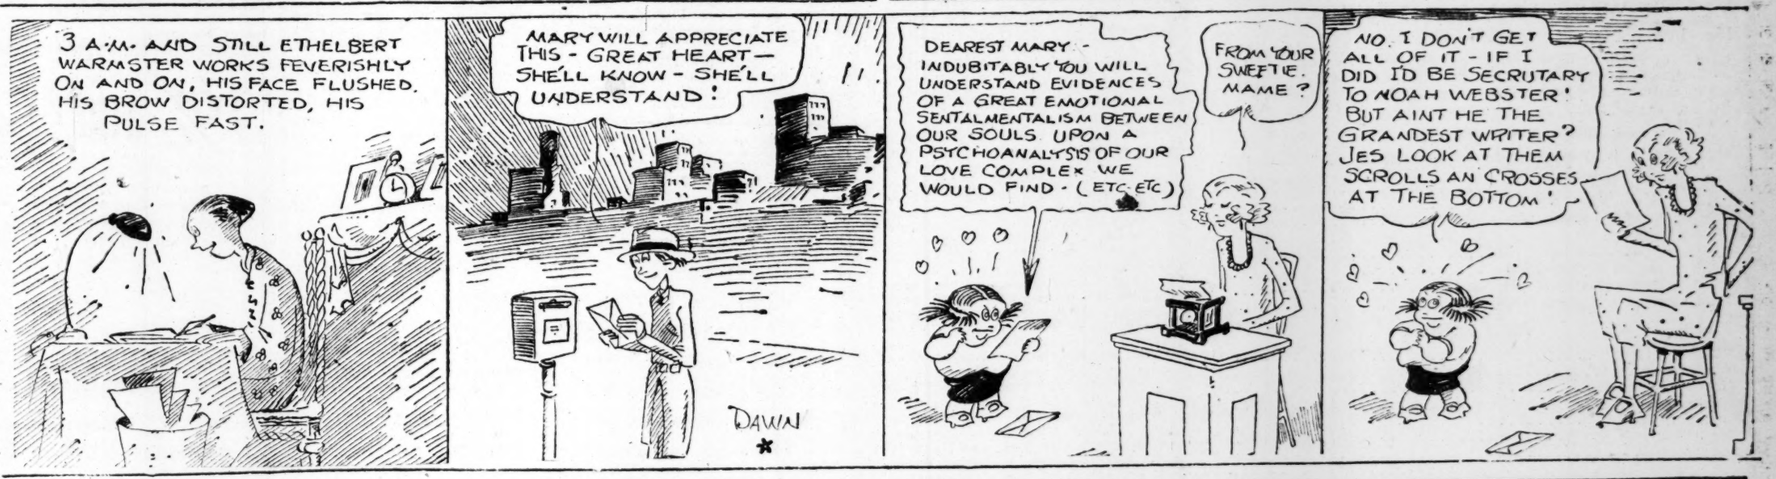

"That was not your reason for not seeing me. But you needn't have been afraid. I came merely to give you back your letters to France. They were well written—they fooled me completely." He drew a packet from his blouse. "Here they are."

She took them, staring at them with curiosity more than any other emotion. They marked so clearly the distance she had traveled.

"She sent him away with a smile—and welcomed him back with a wink. Or didn't you see him?"

"No. I suppose the fever had burned out. All the returning divisions had paraded, heroes rewarded according to their deserts—some of them. Demobilization—humanity lifting her head and shaking the burdens from her shoulders. A new deal! Forget the war! Music of the dance and all that sort of thing—the dead past burying its dead—" She stopped short. "I'm really horrid."

"Not horrid—delightful. Muriel, you have depths. You talk like an English comedy." He smiled tenderly. "As for me, I am getting fearfully jealous of that aviator. I—I—" He paused as though in a spell of gathering emotion. "I want to possess you absolutely. I love you."

As he spoke, he seized her hand, drawing her gently to him. She placed her disengaged hand against his shoulder resistantly.

"Muriel, don't rebuff me like that. I can't stand it, you know, I've told you I loved you; I'm going to kiss you." He drew her close, his face hovering over her lips.

"If you do, it will be the last time you ever kiss me." She didn't struggle, and her voice was calm.

He started back with an exclamation.

He secured possession of both hands. "I love you. . . . You don't love me—is that it?"

"I don't know. I—I thought I did. There was nothing I wanted so much as to hear what you have said to me."

"Well, I've said it, Muriel."

"And it leaves me cold, that's the curious thing, Arthur. It's a mood, of course." She withdrew her hands. "Are the things I have been doing the past year, the life I've been leading, unreal? Sort of a dream?"

"Silly girl!"

"I don't know. May it not be unreal—to all of us? Cousin Gregory said the other night that all life was a sea of cocktails and jazz and money-spending and intrigue. He said it was never like this before the war."

"Gregory Trine is a nice one to talk."

"Oh, he admitted he was as bad—he said 'bad'—as the rest. He said we had to spend our money or the government would get it, or—oh, I don't know; he was fearfully cynical."

Fane with sudden movement stepped close to her.

"Let me tell you what's the matter with you, fairest; you're fagged out with the winter and spring—a bit morbid, need a change. Let me show you what you need." He took her in his arms, kissing her, looking down into her face. She made no effort to release herself. "Now all nonsense is over. We'll announce our engagement tonight—"

"They've told me, Arthur, that by no possibility would you ever be contented with one woman—"

"Yes, I know the sort of talk. But listen: I'm nearly forty. I've knocked around a lot. I've had affairs of sorts—yes, lots of 'em. I'd be married now if there had been any love about any of them. But there hasn't been, not on either side. Now I'm tired of it all. You fill my mind and heart—"

"Oh—damn! I'm sorry, Muriel, but you are exacperating. Now, come—we'll announce our engagement; we'll be married in the fall. You'll be the most popular, the most charming young matron in the set. As a hostess—"

She released herself gently from his arms.

"Not now—I mean not tonight, Arthur. You are terribly flattering; you fascinate me, in a way. I—I want to do as you ask. I—yes, I want to give myself to you. It—but you'll have to wait—"

He was studying her.

"You mean I'll have to wait until you see that aviator—is that it?"

She nodded.

"Yes, but not in the way you mean. It's simply, Arthur, that—that—I don't want to fly with him as an engaged girl. That's all. I don't know why; I suppose it's a sentimental fancy, an utterly senseless sense of fitness."

"I suppose it is. But suppose I

GIRL, 17, VICTIM OF HAMMER ATTACK, NAMES ASSAILANT

New Brunswick, N. J., June 22.—Seventeen-year-old Veronica Schultz, victim of a hammer attack said by police to have been committed Friday night by George Meier, 18, while the pair were riding in his automobile, tonight continued her battle against death. Her condition was very serious, physicians said.

Meier, who was arrested late last night after Miss Schultz, during a moment of consciousness, named him as her assailant, today, according to police, issued a statement in which he explained he struck the girl after she became violently ill from drinking whisky which he said was purchased just a few minutes before.

WINTER ANSWERS CROUCH'S LETTER

Rogers Winter, publicity director of the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial, has furnished The Constitution with the following reply to a letter written to The Constitution and published Sunday, in reference to differences over the conduct of the memorial project, which has led to an appeal to the courts:

"Editor Constitution: Charles F. Crouch has taken it upon himself to write a card to The Constitution attacking me as publicity director of the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial.

"My only reason for taking any notice of him is that the public is entitled to know what connection he sought to establish for himself with this enterprise.

"Crouch turned up in the memorial office in the fall of last year as the forerunner of one Napoleon Hill, editor of a publication in New York called 'Napoleon Hill's Magazine,' or some such title. Crouch represented to D. W. Webb, then the executive secretary of the memorial, and to myself as publicity director, that Napoleon Hill was a man of really Napoleonic powers of achievement. He intimated that Napoleon Hill could put his Napoleonic shoulders to the wheel and raise all the money needed to carve the memorial on Stone mountain, provided we would extend him the right sort of invitation and inducement. Comparing notes on Crouch after his departure, Mr. Webb and I found that our opinions of him coincided exactly.

Accompanied By Hill.

"Some days later Crouch turned up again, this time in company with Napoleon Hill. We gave Mr. Hill a polite reception, told him the story of the memorial, and arranged for him to be received at Stone mountain and shown over the work and through the studio. He returned to the memorial office in a state of the highest enthusiasm about the wonder and glory of the project. He said he would like to give a newspaper interview about it, which, if I remember correctly, I took from him and published in the Atlanta newspapers.

"For two or three days Crouch and Hill made frequent visits to the memorial office. Crouch kept intimating to Mr. Webb and myself that Hill was prepared to make a Napoleonic contribution to the memorial if we would show the right interest in him and give him some encouragement. Finally we decided to draw them out on the plan, out of curiosity to see what they were driving at. In substance it was this:

"Hill would undertake to raise $75,000,000, or some such outlandish amount of money, ten or twelve times the estimated cost of the memorial, if the association would turn over to him the money-raising department, and would couple the memorial with a scheme he was then endeavoring to put afloat for a great industrial colony to be operated on the 'Golden Rule plan,' whatever that meant; then he would cap off the whole project by carving an immense statue of Jesus Christ at or near the top of the mountain, above the Confederate military panoramo.

"Imagine such a thing: A Confederate memorial, the most majestic and beautiful work of the kind in the history of mankind; strung around the memorial an assortment of factories; capping these off, as the master stroke of sacrilege and flimflammery, a figure of Jesus carved on the mountain.

"When Napoleon Hill presented this Napoleonic idea to me, I informed him in substance that I thought his mind was wandering, which seemed to hurt his feelings. Mr. Webb, I think, reacted to his idea a little more diplomatically but no more favorably.

Books Audited, He Says.

"Crouch and Hill then and there faded out of the memorial, as quickly as they had faded into it. Neither of them made or offered to make a contribution to the fund. A great magazine article which Hill was going to write in his personally conducted organ of 'The Golden Rule' has never materialized, so far as I know. Crouch returned a time or two to bother Mr. Webb, but bothered me no more.

"Crouch in his card to The Constitution makes the assertion that contributors to the memorial have not been able to get an audit. This is a lie out of the whole cloth. The association's books have been completely in the hands of a certified public accountant since the money raising campaign was started in May, 1923, and have been audited monthly, and quarterly, and semi-annually, and annually. No contributor has asked for an audit that I know of, but the books are open alike to contributors and the public. The more they are examined the more will the public congratulate the splendid executive committee of public-spirited citizens, working without pay or the hope thereof, on the results they have accomplished at an expense phenomenally low in comparison with the usual expense of raising public subscriptions.

"Crouch's gall in criticizing the administration of the memorial is on a par with his gall in attempting to foist upon Mr. Webb and myself a man whose scheme was to convert the memorial into an industrial promotion camouflaged with the holy name and image of the Savior. If Crouch or his Napoleonic side partner have any complaint, it is because Mr. Webb and I got rid of them in the unceremonious manner above stated.

"ROGERS WINTER,
"Publicity Director, the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial."

FIVE BADLY INJURED IN MONTEZUMA CRASH

Montezuma, Ga., June 22.—(Special.)—Young people, including James Hays, Marshall Devaughn, John Day, Pauline Brooks, of Montezuma, and Elizabeth Burgess, of Dublin, miraculously escaped serious injury when the steering rod came loose in the car in which they were returning from swimming, and the car turned over near Harrison's mill.

James Hays, who was driving, suffered a broken ankle; Elizabeth Burgess, a broken collar bone, and the other members of the party received severe bruises and cuts.

U. S. WORLD FLIERS HIT ROUGH GOING IN BURMA HILLS

London, June 22.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Rangoon, British India, says the American round-the-world fliers experienced difficulties in their journey between Bangkok and Burma, particularly when crossing the Siamese mountains, where they encountered air pockets and had to fly through dense clouds.

The dispatch adds that Captain Lowell H. Smith, commander of the squadron, is suffering from an intestinal disorder contracted at Tavoy and that his condition is delaying the departure of the fliers from Rangoon.

POEMS THAT LIVE

The Morning-Glory.

Was it worth while to paint so fair
Thy every leaf—to vein with a faultless art
Each petal, taking the boon light and air
Of summer so to heart?

To bring thy beauty unto perfect of flower,
Then like a passing fragrance or a smile,
Vanish away, beyond recovery's power—
Was it, frail bloom, worth while?

Thy silence answers: "Life was mine!
And I, who pass without regret or grief,
Have cared the more to make my moment fine,
Because it was so brief.
"In its first radiance I have seen
The sun!—why tarry then till comes the night?
I go my way, content that I have been Part of the morning light!"
